Inefficiency, Waste Laid To WPB Iron, Steel Branch

Shake-up Needed To Obtain Maximum Output, Board Expert Is Said to Have Found

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

A War Production Board engineering consultant is completing a report indicting the WPB Iron and Steel Branch for wasteful and inefficient handling of the country's steel production program, but simultaneously pointing out that it is still not too late to correct for past mistakes in order to secure maximum possible use of available steel resources for war purposes, it was learned yesterday.

The report is being completed by Frederick I. Libbey, employed in the Office of WPB Production Planner Robert Nathan, for the information of top WPB executives and the iron and steel branch. Although Libbey refused to disclose the contents of his report, details were secured from other WPB officials with whom Libbey has discussed the subject.

Need for New Blood Stressed

Libbey, whose findings were the result of an actual tour of steel mills in operation and consultation with the best technical brains in the steel industry, is reported to have come to the conclusion that the present iron and steel branch must be reorganized with a transfusion of new blood—technical men who know all aspects of the industry and are familiar with small mills as well as large ones, it was reported.

First job of the new blood would be to make a survey of all existing steel-making capacity as the first step in setting up a comprehensive plan for most efficient use of all steel facilities.

This plan would be accompanied by the setting up of a warrant system which would provide for the distribution of steel products to the most essential users.

Warrants Would Be Issued

According to associates, Libbey placed considerable stress on the absence of technical engineering brains in the WPB iron and steel branch. Although he praised Reese Taylor, head of the branch, for his understanding of the program, Libbey is reported to have expressed the opinion that other branch officials are primarily steel salesmen, rather than production engineers—salesmen whom the major steel companies were glad to palm off on the Government after the rapidly expanding war program made further efforts to sell steel unnecessary.

Under the proposed warrant system, all available steel-making capacity would be allocated by the

Hankin Ousted, Flanagan to Be PUC Head

Gregory Hankin was ousted by his colleagues yesterday from his position as chairman of the Public Utilities Commission and James H. Flanagan was elected in his place, effective September 1.

The move, which Hankin said came as "no surprise to me," followed months of dissention within the three-man commission, climaxed over the past weekend with two concurrent disputes between the chairman and his two colleagues.

Flanagan and Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz, third member of the P. U. C., said that the step was taken "for the interest of the public and the benefit of the Commission."

Hankin said: "I have been warned by my friends, both in private and in P. U. C. forums, that if I continued to protect the public interest I would be ousted as chairman. I was not going to give up my duty to the public for this rather questionable honor."

Flanagan's nomination was made by Kutz at a special executive session of the P. U. C., called at 2:15 p. m yesterday, and was seconded by the candidate. Hankin did not

ADA Promises To Waterproof Leaky Project

Knox Hill Houses Inherited From FHA Fail to Keep Out Rain

All Knox Hill housing development families with wet rugs can take heart.

Alley Dwelling Authority, the landlord, will be out there with some weather-proofing experts this morning to see what can be done about the "queer" leaking walls.

ADA inherited Knox Hill, at 3000 Knox Street Southeast, from the old USHA and has been unable to determine why the 100-odd brick veneer houses in the 250-home project cannot take any kind of rainy weather. By some quirk in the construction, rain gets through the bricks, trickles down to the concrete-slab floors and then flows gaily to the rugs.

In addition to wet-rug trouble, the ADA also is having gully trouble at Knox Hill and Stoddert Dwellings. Both developments were built in hilly sections. When the knolls were cut down or scooped out for the buildings bare banks were left. As a result, soil erosion and drainage difficulties have been terrific.

Gilbert Rodier, director of Federal Public Housing Administration offices for the Washington Metropolitan area, said his office was "taking steps to make appropriate remedies." While ADA is the landlord, FPHA holds the purse strings and must produce between $5000 and $6000 for drainage and sodding at Knox Hill—and more than that for the same thing at Stoddert, were 200 families live. Unofficially, it is feared the weather proofing at Knox Hill may cost above $30,000.

5 Brazilian Ships Sunk; Troops on 1

'Crime Won't Go Unpunished,' Angry Government Pledges; Allies Lose 2 More

By the Associated Press

Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 17.—Axis submarines, preying on coastal shipping, have sunk five more Brazilian passenger and cargo ships, including the 4801-ton Baependy, which was carrying soldiers, the government announced tonight in a statement which bitterly criticized the Axis and promised the "crimes" would not go unpunished.

All Sunk in Last 3 Days

(Simultaneous with the Brazilian government's announcement was one from the United States Navy, which told of the destruction of a Panamanian and a United States merchant vessel. The separate announcements raised the Associated Press total of announced sinkings of United and neutral nations' vessels in the Western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor to 433.)

The loss of the Baependy, the 1905-ton Annibal Benevelo and the 4872-ton Araraquara was first announced. Later the statement was amended to include the 1075-ton Arara and the 2189-ton Itagiba.

All five ships were sunk in the last three days, between Bahia and the State of Sergipe, on the coast below the big eastern bulge of Brazil, the announcement said.

"It must be revealed that the Baependy, which was going northeast, carried an Army unit with reduced number of forces, of which only some were convoked reserves," the government said.

Sub Skipper Apologizes

"Rumors dispersed about high military losses haven not the slightest foundation."

The official announcement made no other reference to casualties.

(In Buenos Aires, however, Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu personally conveyed to the Brazilian Ambassador the condolences of his government and people for the sinkings which "cost so many"

Another Shower Brings Promise Of Cooler Day

Washington, now accustomed to heavy August rains, got another washing down early last night and the promise of cooler weather today.

Temperatures ranged in the 80's yesterday and had fallen to 76 degrees at 6 p. m., when the shower came.

The Weather Bureau announced that there has been, to date in August, 9.12 inches of rain or 6.85 inches above normal. The daily temperature mean to date has been 21 degrees in excess of the normal daily mean, it was said.

Gen. Eaker Leads Fliers

All-American Attack Smashes Rouen Yards

By J. Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

An American Bomber Station in Britain, Aug. 17.—Twelve Flying Fortress crews led personally by Maj. Gen. Ira C. Eaker dropped tons of explosives by daylight today on the railway yards at Rouen in France in the first full-fledged all-American bombing blow against the Nazis.

The Americans met and mastered the latest type German fighter planes. Not a single American bomber was lost, and their bombs hit "the heart of the target."

"They carried out their mission nonchalantly and coolly," tough, cigar-smoking General Eaker said proudly of his men as he climbed out of his "Yankee Doodle" craft which made the historic high-level precision run over Rouen, 87 miles northwest of Paris.

"We will bomb Germany as fast and as often as possible until we win the war," declared Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, commander of the United States Air Forces in the European theater. General Eaker heads the bomber command on General Spaatz's staff.

One American bomber gunner bagged one of the Nazis' newest fighter planes, a Focke-Wulf 190, during the flight, and escorting Allied fighters got two more. The Allies lost two fighters.

MAJ. GEN. IRA EAKER

"A great pall of smoke and sand was left over the railroad tracks," General Eaker said.

General Spaatz was at the field to greet "Flying General" Eaker on his return.

White House Gets Bill to Pay Dependents

Navy Ready to Send Out Checks to Families When President Signs

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate late yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill permitting, but not ordering, immediate payments of monthly cash allowances to dependents of men in the four lowest grades of the armed services. The benefits have been accruing since June 1, but under the original dependency law payments could not be started until November 1.

The Navy will begin paying out the cash allowances to dependents of men in its services as soon as the President signs the new bill, a Navy Department spokesman said last night. The War Department, which opposed removing the November 1 dealine, reported it would have no statement about its plans for starting payments until after the bill had become law.

Approval of the cash benefits bill came on a voice vote after the Senate had postponed until Thursday final action on a bill to permit service men on duty away from their home States but within the continental United States to vote in the coming November elections.

Asked whether the Navy's statement meant that payments to dependents of its service men "could" be made or "would" be made, its spokesman said that the latter verb

1st Lady Rebuked For Comments About Weather

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today in her syndicated column "My Day" that she had received a "stern letter" from the censorship board for commenting on the weather.

"The censor has written me a very stern letter about my remarks on the weather, and so from now on I shall not tell you whether it rains or whether the sun shines where I happen to be." She wrote, however, "I imagine it is permissible to mention whether it is hot or cold, and I can tell you with joy that it was cold enough on Saturday to take a walk in Washington with pleasure."

George A. Carlin, general manager of United Features, which syndicates Mrs. Roosevelt's column, said he had received a communication last week specifically referring to Mrs. Roosevelt's discusion or "rain and showers."

He said he forwarded the censor's letter to Mrs. Roosevelt as a matter of routine.

Germans Cross Kuban, Peril Red Naval Base

Stalingrad Pincers Stalled as 5000 Nazis Are Killed

By International News Service

Moscow (Tuesday), Aug. 18.—German tanks and troops driving on the Black Sea naval base of Novorossisk have crossed the lower Kuban River at two points in the Krasnodar area of the northwest Caucasus, thus penetrating the last water barrier before their objective, Russia acknowledged today.

But the wide Nazi pincers offensive against Stalingrad on the Volga River bend was declared to have been stalled by objective Soviet resistance which caused the slaughter of 5000 German officers and men in one sector alone.

Another Drive Stemmed

Likewise, a concentrated Nazi push on the valuable Grozny oil fields and the Caspian Sea appeared to have been stemmed in savage fighting around the central Caucasian railway town of Mileralnye Vody, 130 miles northwest of the petroleum area

At the upper hinge of the flaming southern front, the Germans were disclosed to be prosecuting a major new offensive southwest of Voronezh, where they were bringing in "large reinforcements," the Soviet midnight communique revealed.

Ominous Development

The bulletin told of "heavy fighting on the west bank of the Don River" south of Voronezh, where the Nazi hordes were obviously attempting to cancel gains made by Marshal Semeon Timohsenko's troops in a counterpush that had threatened the entire German left

Second Front Plan Settled At Moscow

Churchill Confidant Says Premier's Visit To Stalin May Signal War's Turning Point

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 17.—Winston Churchill, Josef Stalin and United States and British field and staff commanders have met for four days in Moscow and reached decisions for turning back the Germans on a tremendous battleground, the United Nations disclosed today.

The bare fact that there had been a four-day Kremlin conference, which began with Churchill's arrival in Moscow last Wednesday aboard a four-mbtored American Liberator bomber with American pilots at the controls, and ended Saturday, was disclosed in communiques issued in Moscow and London. Churchill left Moscow Sunday.

Formula Reached, London Feels

But a source close to the British Prime Minister described this first Churchill-Stalin meeting as marking an epoch and added that it might prove a turning point in the war.

There was no doubt that Stalin talked with Churchill on the topic uppermost in the minds of the Russian people—the starting of a second front.

(London viewed the disclosures as meaning that Russia, the United States and Britain had reached a formula on how to beat the Axis and when to open a second front.)

Purpose Clear, British Say

"A number of decisions were reached covering the field of the war against Hitlerite Germany and her associates in Europe," said the Russian communique (making a clear distinction between the European Front and that against Japan in the Pacific, where Russia is formally neutral).

"In this just war of liberation both governments (Russia and Britain) are determined to carry on with all their power and energy until complete destruction of Hit-

Two Veteran Navy Pilots Missing In Blimp Mystery

San Francisco, Aug. 17 (AP).—Two veterans in operation of dirigibles were listed as missing today as the Navy pursued vague clews to their mysterious disappearance from a disabled patrol blimp which fell in a suburban street.

The two, only members of the crew, were Lieut. Ernest DeWitt Cody, 27, graduate of the Naval Academy in 1938, rated as a skilled pilot in lighter-than-air craft, and Ensign Charles E. Adams, 38, whose Navy career of 20 years had been almost exclusively devoted to such craft. Lieutenant Cody came from Akron, Ohio; Ensign Adams, from Lakehurst, N. J.

Foe May Counterattack, but Vital Area of Islands Is in Our Hands; Enemy Warships Never Got Near Our Transports in Night Action

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy announced last night that enemy resistance in the strategic Guadalcanal-Tulagi area in the Solomon Islands has been "overcome" and that the shore positions which were the objective of the first American offensive of the war have been "taken."

A Japanese fleet which attempted to block the counterinvasion of the Solomons, a late communique declared, has been driven off following heavy close-range fighting.

The sea battle, between an American force of cruisers and destroyers and a Jap armada of like composition, was fought the night of August 8-9.

Damage was done to both fleets in the encounter, but the enemy warships failed even to reach their objective—our troopships bearing Marine landing forces—the Navy disclosed.

Earlier, however, it had been revealed that the American forces suffered considerable warship and personnel casualties in the assault.

Battle's First Phase Over, Victory Is Ours

Naval authorities here agreed that the first phase of the Battle of the Solomons was over and that it was an American victory. The Japs may well counterattack and prolong the fight over the islands for many months, but for the moment the fighting is over and we have won.

"The mission has been successfully completed," one officer stated.

Telling of the night battle between the opposing fleets of cruisers and destroyers, August 8-9, the Navy said that this was the only engagement between the United States and Japanese surface naval forces fought to date in the Solomons.

Shore positions taken by Marines in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area (1) of the Solomons have since been developed and well established, the Navy announced last night. Map indicates how seizure of Tulagi Harbor and capture of a big air base on Guadalcanal would put the whole island chain in easy range of fighter and bomber planes of the Army Air Forces.

No further statement was made as to the American and Jap ship losses in this battle. On August 10, Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, announced that heavy fighting was under way and that on the basis of incomplete reports we had had at least one cruiser sunk and two cruisers, two destroyers and a transport damaged.

King said then that our forces had destroyed a large number of enemy planes and had put Japanese surface warships "out of action."

Last night's communique declared that we had destroyed at least 36 enemy planes in the initial phases of the battle, but threw no further light on the warship losses of the opposing fleets.

Night Hid Foe's Losses in Sea Battle

"It is impossible, in night engagements, to determine accurately the damage inflicted on the opposing force," the Navy said. "No further statement is made at this time of the extent of damage to our forces because of the obvious value of such information to the enemy."

The Navy communique gave the first official resume of the 11-day-old battle to be issued. Declaring that "it is now possible to issue some details of the attacks and landing operations which have been in progress in the Solomons Islands since the early morning of August 7 (local time)," the report revealed that:

The landing assaults were a complete surprise to the Japanese forces in the area, so much so that 18 enemy seaplanes were destroyed before they could take wing.

The United States Marines who made landings on several—at least three—islands in the Solomons "rapidly" overcame "vigorous" enemy resistance.

A "number" of Japanese prisoners were captured by the Marines.

The shore positions in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area in the Solomons "taken" by the Marines have "since been developed and are now well established." This suggested to military observers here that Japanese-held airdromes on Guadalcanal and perhaps other islands are now being used against the Nipponese.

During the landing operations, the Navy revealed, cruisers and destroyers of Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley's forces covered the movement. (Ghormley was in command of all operations in the area.)

Enemy shore-based airplanes attacked the landing operations and the covering fleet on August 7 and 8, it was disclosed. They managed, however, to inflict only minor damage on the United States forces and were

U. S. Tax Experts Dig Deeper Into Fish's Trujillo Deal

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Federal income tax experts dug deeper yesterday into the story of the secret $25,000 Representative Hamilton Fish took from the Dominican dictator—Gen. Rafael L. Trujillo—just before Fish went to Germany in 1939.

Fish was quizzed, under oath, by Government agents last week.

This protracted questioning was private, and it was not disclosed whether the New York Congressman stuck to the story he told the newspapers when The Post uncovered his deal with Trujillo two weeks ago.

Fish, who is the ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he was just an agent in some wildcat oil speculation for Trujillo, who is the boss of the Dominican Republic.

Fish said also that it was "a direct falsehood" that his income tax returns were under scrutiny.

When the income tax investigation is completed, several points will be up for determination. These are:

1. Whether Fish owes any income tax on the $25,000 he got from the foreign ruler. Fish paid $12,500 back to Trujillo and claims he lost the rest on oil speculations.

2. If Fish owes any tax, whether he must pay a penalty for failing to report it with the more than

Says Rationing May Come

Official Urges 'Meatless Days;' U. S. to Be 3 Billion Lbs. Short

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Meat may be rationed to insure a fair distribution of a short supply in the United States, a Government official reported today.

And the American people, he added, may be asked to observe meatless days before any rationing system would be put into operation.

Roy F. Hendrickson, Administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Administration, asserted action along those lines should be taken because a three-billion-pound shortage of meat for civilian consumption would develop in the months ahead.

He told members of the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers that the statistical outlook for the year which began July 1, 1942, was this:

The bumper livestock crop is expected to yield 21.7 billion pounds of meat compared with an average of 17.8 billion for the 1937-1941 period. But we shall ship about 3.2 billion pounds to Russia and England to sustain troops now fighting and who will be in combat "when the second front opens."

Our armed forces and our Allies will require approximately 35 per cent of our Federally inspected meat production. The quantity of Federally inspected meat left for civilian consumers in this country will be about 11 billion pounds. That would be sufficient under

Speculation Rife Here, in London On Churchill, Stalin's Decisions

British Observers Expect Offensives In Europe, Orient

By the United Press

London, Aug. 17.—Prime Minister Churchill, Josef Stalin and United States officials, in conferences at Moscow, have worked out a plan for meeting the force of Hitler's colossal striking power during the next two months and for Allied counter-blows in both Europe and the Far East, it was reported tonight.

British officials frankly believe that the war will reach a grand climax in the two months remaining before winter sets in on the Russian front.

Best-informed British sources believed that Churchill, W. Averell Harriman, United States defense liaison chief, and the associates on their mission to Moscow obtained the full details of Russia's desperate military situation in their four-day conferences with Stalin.

The Allied chiefs, in turn, were believed to have outlined their second-front prospects fully, with the result that a world-wide strategy was formulated.

London itself was seething with rumors of "something big about to happen," but official sources remained silent.

The best military experts were still skeptical of the Allies' prospects for invading Europe during the next few months on a scale big enough to assure a genuine second front. Although Russian sources contend that only a little more than 12 German divisions, including 3 armored ones, are available in France and Belgium, British and Free French intelligence agents insist that the number is from 20 to 24 divisions, and that Hitler could throw another 50 divisions into the West without touching his forces in Russia.

A clause in the communique revealing Churchill's mission that caught most attention here was one reaffirming the joint determination to fight Hitlerism to its extinction. Some quarters here have been expressing fears that Russia might be forced out of the war, at least as an effective military power.

Russia's ability to fight on or counterattack was regarded as the most vital factor in determining when Britain and the United States will hurl their armies against Western Europe.

It was also understood that President Roosevelt and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China have maintained the closest daily contact with the discussions and were fully informed of all decisions.

While the announcement referred chiefly to the war against Germany, it was believed the talks also covered possible American moves to help Russia in event Japan invaded Siberia in an effort to deliver a "coup de grace" to Russian resistance.

There was no indication whether Churchill had returned to Britain and speculation on his whereabouts was forbidden.

Attack of 'Shattering Proportions' Talked Of in D. C. Comment

By International News Service

In Washington last night early Allied action of "shattering proportions" was expected as a logical aftermath of the Moscow war parleys.

The White House and State Department were awaiting a full report from Presidential Representative W. Averell Harriman on the momentous decisions reported to have been reached at the Kremlin.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, pending receipt of this report, sidestepped press conference requests for comment on the Moscow conversations by explaining that if someone could whisper to him what had taken place he might be able to whisper something in reply.

Second front enthusiasts in congressional ranks, however, regarded the Churchill-Stalin conferences as a definite indication that coordinated American-British-Soviet action is about to emerge from the blueprnt stage.

Speculation, accordingly, was limited not to the time when concerted Allied blows will be struck against the Axis but rather the operational theater that may have been selected for a major action against Hitler's war machine.

The presence of Gen. James H. Doolittle in London was cited as evidence that American participation in large-scale air raids on Germany is "on the eve of actualization."

The London announcement late yesterday of heavy raids on Nazi occupied France by British-based American air forces tended to support this view.

The make up of the British-American delegation participating in the Moscow talks and specifically the inclusion of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, the British commander in chief in India, and Maj. Gen. Russell T. Maxwell, United States commander in the Middle East, gave particular importance to the Allied position south and southeast of the Caucasus.

lerism and any similar tyranny has been achieved.

"The discussions, which were carried on in an atmosphere of cordiality and complete sincerity, provided an opportunity of reaffirming the existence of the close friendship and understanding between the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States of America, in entire accordance with the Allied relationships existing among them."

These existing relationships already include formal Anglo-American recognition of the urgency of opening a European Second Front in 1942. Pronouncements to this effect were made from Washington and London in June, following the trip of Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet foreign commissar, to both capitals.

Against this background a source close to Prime Minister Churchill said, when asked what the conversations were about "any child in the street should know the answer to that."

The Moscow radio broadcast this statement by Churchill, made here for a newsreel:

"We are full of determination to continue to fight hand in hand whatever sufferings or whatever difficulties may await us, to continue to fight hand in hand like comrades and brothers until the last remnants of the Hitlerite regime are smashed and only remain as a memory to the world and as a warning to future time."

Churchill sent the following telegram to Stalin on leaving Moscow:

"I take the opportunity of thanking you for your comradely attitude and hospitality. I am very glad to have visited Moscow because I am certain that our contact will play a useful part in furthering our cause. Please convey my kind regards to Molotov."

(It was announced in Capetown that Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa, conferred with Churchill in Cairo before the latter flew to Moscow.)

W. Averell Harriman, personal representative of President Roosevelt to the conference, also was recorded as saying:

"The President of the United States appointed me to accompany the Prime Minister of Great Britain during this most important visit to Moscow at this decisive moment. The President will be in agreement with all the decisions that have been taken here by Mr. Churchill. America will stand hand in hand at the front with Russia."

The scope of the conferences—and the Allied plans—was evident in the very personnel of the British-American delegation of 20.

Wavell, Maxwell Present

Among them, in addition to Harriman were:

Gen. Sir Alan Francis Brooke, chief of the British imperial general staff, whose home army would spear-head any Allied invasion of the continent.

Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the British commander in chief in India, last main bastion between union of the German and Japanese armies. Wavell, too, is Britain's recognized expert on the Middle East, where Russia and her Allies may have to form a joint front.

Maj. Gen. Russell P. Maxwell, the United States commander in the Middle East, where American forces already are in strong air action and where United States ground forces are in reserve, in both supply and fighting fields.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur William Teder, commander in chief of the R. A. F. in the Middle East; Brig. Gen. S. P. Spalding, the United States officer charged with Russian lend-lease matters in Washington; Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent British undersecretary for foreign affairs, and Loy Henderson, assistant chief of European affairs in the United States Department of State

Churchill held four long conferences with Stalin at the Kremlin on Wednesday and Thursday nights, while the British and United States military authorities talked with Marshal Boris M. Shaposhnikov, chief of the Red army general staff, and Marshal Klementi E. Voroshilov, who is training the Soviet Union's vast reserves of man power behind the Urals.

The first Churchill-Stalin meeting, on Thursday night, lasted 3 hours and 40 minutes.

Given State Dinner

A highlight of Churchill's visit was a state dinner at the Kremlin on Friday night. Persons who attended said both Churchill and Stalin were in the highest of spirits.

Informants said that at least 25 different toasts—one of them to President Roosevelt—must have been drunk and that the dinner consisted of 26 courses.

Moscow's corps of foreign correspondents got their first inkling of what was up last Wednesday afternoon when three big American Liberators appeared over the city, escorted by a cloud of Russian fighters.

Subsequently it was learned that Churchill's plane was piloted by two American members of the R. A. F. Ferry Command, Pilot William Vanderkloot, 28, of Sarasota, Fla., and Copilot Jack Ruggles, 27, of San Francisco.

Looking down on Moscow as his plane came in for the landing, Churchill said:

"The houses from the top look very thin."

Once on the ground, he stepped into the sunshine with Harriman to be greeted warmly by Molotov and Russian military dignitaries. A Russian band played successively "God Save the King," "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "The Internationale."

Both Churchill and Harriman spoke briefly into a recording machine for later broadcast. Churchill praised the Russian army, the beauty of the countryside. Harriman's remarks were likewise general.

Then the Prime Minister went to a house which the Russians had set aside for him. Harriman went to the regular Foreign Office guest house, which was reserved for his use.

Scotland Yard Inspector W. H. Thompson and Churchill's valet, Sawyers, were at the Prime Minister's heels.

ever-increasing American bombing offensive," General Spaatz declared.

General Eaker said the Americans made a perfect run over Rouen, the ancient cathedral city where Joan of Arc was martyred at the stake in 1431.

Other United States bombers made diversionary feints at Dunkerque and the Cherbourg Peninsula to mask the middle blow at Rouen. British, Canadian and American fighter pilots escorted these diversion flights as well as running interference at Rouen.

Alabama Boy Wins Honor

To 21-year-old Sergt. Kent L. West of West Blocton, Ala., the "belly gunner" in a fortress, fell the honor of shooting down the first Nazi fighter plane for the United States European Army.

He was riding in his big ship, named "Birmingham Blitzkrieg," when the German pilot, flying a Focke-wulf 190—one of the Nazis' newest warplanes—climbed toward him.

Several short bursts from Sergeant Kent's 50-caliber guns ended that menace.

Watches Bomb Drop

"I watched the bombs drop through the open bays," the general said. "Then I grabbed the oxygen bottle and went back to the waist of the ship and looked out and saw bombs drop right at the heart of the target."

The bomber chief said that bright sunlight outlined the target and the fortresses made only one run, keeping formation from the time they left the field to their return several hours later.

During the day, it was disclosed that Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle who led the United States squadron which bombed Tokyo April 18 had been in London ten days on a special mission. He will return soon to the United States.

Calcutta Mob Wrecks Wires, Burns Trolley

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bombay, Aug. 17.—Bands of demonstrators pulled down telephone and telegraph wires and burned a streetcar in Calcutta today, but quiet prevailed for the fourth successive day in populous Bombay as the issue of Indian independence appeared no nearer solution than it did a week ago.

American troops stationed at a town in India were molested during recent disturbances, Brig. Gen. Francis Bradley, their commander, said today at Karachi, India.

There were no reports of Americans being injured and General Bradley did not explain the nature of the disturbances. The town in which the incident occurred was placed out of bounds for United States troops.

While the working committee of the Moslem League was meeting here in closed session, 14 nationalist newspapers in Calcutta voted to suspend publication indefinitely "in protest against the latest restrictions of newspapers imposed by the government of India."

The publishers decided to close shop August 21. The papers include both English and Indian vernacular, among them the important Amrita Patrika which has a circulation of about 40,000—small by American standards, but one of the largest in India.

Question Before Committee

The total circulation represented by the papers is estimated to be about 140,000. The regulations against which the publishers are protesting were announced by the government as intended to prevent the publication of anything which would encourage the current civil disobedience movement.

Several other newspapers have already quit publication on the suggestion of Mohandas K. Gandhi shortly before he was arrested. Among these were the English edition of Gandhi's own paper, Harijan, and the National Herald of Allahabad, which is published by Pandit Nehru.

One question before the working committee of the Moslem League was whether it should campaign to get the British government and the Hindus to recognize its demand for partition of India into separate Hindu and Moslem states.

Another question was the attitude the league would take toward the present unrest.

A number of Hindu shops in Bombay and in other parts of India were closed today because of the death of Mahadev Desae, secretary to Gandhi. Desai, the leader's confidant, died of heart disease Saturday.

Moslem grain dealers in Bombay formed an association to protect their own interests in the face of the closing of many shops, a part of the disobedience camaign limited as yet to the Hindus.

British Blast Axis Lighters Off Africa

By the United Press

Cairo, Aug. 17.—British planes, waging a relentless offensive against Axis supply lines behind the Egyptian front, have bombed another force of enemy power lighters off the African coast and have blasted a transport column in the desert, the middle east command announced today.

Both actions occurred Sunday.

Ground activities on the 35-mile desert front west of El Alamein remained at a virtual standstill. A communique said imperial patrols made sorties Saturday night, harassing enemy positions and working parties in the northern and central sectors. Land operations yesterday were restricted to artillery duels.

(A German broadcast claimed that German planes shot down 14 enemy fighter planes over the desert Sunday without loss to themselves. Other aircraft were said to have attacked British air bases at Malta and to have made extensive reconnaissance flights over the Mediterranean.

(An Italian high command communique described reconnaissance activities in Egypt as "livelier," and said some prisoners were taken in patrol fighting. Enemy planes attacked the Axis supply ports of Tobruk and Matruh, but caused only slight damage, and one British beau fighter was destroyed by antiaircraft fire, the communique said. Another enemy plane was shot down at sea while attempting to attack a convoy off North Africa, it added.)

"NOW . . . more than ever it pays to PAY BY CHECK!"

HERE are seven reasons why it will pay you to have a checking account:

A checking account saves tires and gasoline. No special trips around town to pay bills. Just write your personal check and mail it. Save your car for necessary use. This is a real part of the War Effort.

A checking account is business-like. It enables you to handle your personal business affairs in an orderly way. You have a record of money deposited and paid out. Helps you budget. Makes it easier to fill out Income Tax returns.

A checking account saves time. No walking from place to place and standing in line to pay bills. Just write a check and mail it.

A checking account gives you legal receipts. No argument about whether you paid a bill. Your canceled check is a receipt.

A checking account saves money. Checks are cheaper than money orders, busfare, or carfare. Money in bank doesn't "burn holes" in your pocket like dollar bills.

A checking account saves risk. Money in bank can't be lost, stolen, or burned.

A checking account lends prestige. It is looked upon as an indication of financial responsibility, and is a valuable credit reference.

BANK-BY-MAIL
A special service is provided for those who find it convenient to make deposits by mail. Many customers have their salary checks sent in care of the bank, to be credited automatically to their checking accounts. This saves the trouble of making a deposit, and is especially convenient to those who are likely to be out of town on pay-day. Accounts may be used jointly by two or more persons . . . usually husband and wife . . . so that either can draw checks.

• At The Morris Plan Bank of Washington you have your choice of either a "Standard" Checking Account or a "Popular" Checking Account. With a "Popular" Checking Account there is no monthly service charge. You get a book of 10 checks for $1, and use them when you please. That's the only cost, no matter how small your balance may be or how many checks a month you write. Either type of account gives you all the safety and convenience that a checking account affords. The same kind of checkbooks and checks are used for both. Choose the one that would be more economical for you.

• Have a checking account of your own. Pay bills and handle your business affairs this safe, convenient, inexpensive way. Save time, money, tires, gasoline. • The Morris Plan Bank of Washington has more than 23,000 checking customers. You know your account, too, will be welcome. Open one now!

3 Suspects Attack Agents Jury Validity

Midway Echo

Tribune Men To Testify On War Story

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 17.—J. Loy Maloney, managing editor of the Chicago Tribune, and Stanley Johnston, Tribune war correspondent, late today were invited to testify tomorrow before a Federal grand jury investigating a Tribune story on the Battle of Midway.

William D. Mitchell, New York attorney conducting the inquiry, announced the jury's invitation after the two men appeared at the Federal building and offered to testify as well as to sign immunity waivers.

Maloney said he and Johnston made their apearance because of press reports that the jury was nearing the end of its inquiry. The Tribune asked permission last Wednesday to send representatives before the jury, it was learned, but a letter containing the request went unanswered.

The investigation was instigated by Attorney General Francis Biddle to determine whether a Tribune story, which appeared June 7, revealed confidential war information in violation of the amended Espionage Act of 1917. The story detailed the probable make-up of the Japanese fleet engaged in the Midway fight.

Called before the jury today were representatives of the New York Daily News and the Washington Times-Herald, both of whom published the story in question. The men were Ralph Sharp, night news editor of the New York paper, and Frank Waldrop, Times-Herald political and foreign editor.

"Waldrop and I both signed immunity papers," Sharp said. "We came to Chicago to accept service on subpenas before the grand jury. That's all I can say."

Pleas in Abatement Made by Townsend, 2 Other Defendants

The legality of the special grand jury on Axis agents was attacked yesterday by three of the 28 persons indicted here on July 21 on charges of plotting—both before and after Pearl Harbor—to foment disloyalty and mutiny in the armed forces.

These attacks, in the form of pleas in abatement, were filed in the District Court by:

Charles B. Hudson, Omaha, Nebr., editor of the bulletin, America in Danger, whose slogan—until he was indicted—was "End the War Quickly."

James True, Arlington, Va., promotor of Industrial Control Reports, which was listed by the grand jury as one of the instruments of the alleged Nazi propaganda network.

Ralph Townsend, the Japanese agent now serving a prison sentence of eight to 24 months for violating the Foreign Agents Act.

All Demand Jury Trials

All three demanded jury trials of the issues raised by their pleas.

True and Hudson, signing the papers themselves and apparently without lawyers, withdrew their "not guilty" pleas in order to file the pleas in abatement.

Hudson sent his plea from Omaha, and True filed his in Washington. Each has denied having anything to do with the other, or with the rest of the defendants.

By a coincidence, however, these two alleged conspirators hit upon exactly the same wording for their long and complicated pleas in abatement.

History of Jury Recited

All three recited the history of the special grand jury which was set up July 2, 1941, and had been extended, for three months each time, on October 6, 1941; December 31, 1941; April 3, 1942, and July 2, 1942. The extensions authorized the grand jurors to continue investigations begun but not finished during the original term.

The pleas asserted that the investigation which brought the indictment of True and Hudson were not begun in the original term, but long afterward. Both men took oath that they believed this claim was true.

Both the minutes and the sessions of the grand jury are secret.

Winrod May Make Plea

Another alleged conspirator—Gerald B. Winrod, who issues the Defender magazine, at Wichita, Kans.—apparently plans to offer a similar plea. His attorney, Robert Foulston, Wichita, has been given until Thursday to do so.

A number of other defendants are due to appear in the District Court on Thursday to answer the charges. They include William Dudley Pelley, Silver Shirt chief, already serving 15 years for sedition and conspiracy; the jailed German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, and the editors of the seditious paper, Publicity, James F. Garner, and his father, Elmer J. Garner.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan will present new witnesses before the special grand jury today.

Action Sought On Sex Crime Mental Tests

The Commissioners yesterday asked Congress for legislation to enable local courts to order mental examination of persons arrested for sex crimes in the District.

The proposal is part of an effort of local officials to curb the increasing and disproportionate rate of sex offenses in Washington. Already pending in Congress is a bill to provide a jail sentence for the crime of indecent exposure, for which only a fine can now be enacted.

The bill requested yesterday would allow the Police Court to commit persons arrested for indecent exposure or indecent assault to Gallinger Hospital for a 30-day period for observation and examination.

At present, the court is powerless to order such inquiry, even though there is prima facie evidence that a defendant is of unsound mind. The Commissioners asserted that it is "virtually impossible" to establish the insanity of such a defendant, because a jury must decide on the question and psychiatric evidence obtained by the city is now inadmissable in the court.

Dr. Pomfret Named Head of W.&M. College

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., Aug. 17.—Dr. John Edwin Pomfret, 43, dean of the senior college of arts and sciences and of the graduate school of Vanderbilt University, was elected president of the College of William and Mary, second oldest college in the United States, by the William and Mary Board of Visitors today.

Dr. Pomfret will succeed John Stewart Bryan of Richmond, who has filled the office for the past eight years and who gave his resignation to the board in April to take effect not later than January 1.

J. Gordon Bohannan of Petersburg, rector of the board of visitors, said only one ballot was taken and that no other candidate was placed in nomination. The election was unanimous and Dr. Pomfret accepted when called by the board after his election.

He will be the twenty first president of the college since its founding in 1693.

Bryan will become chancellor of the college, a position recreated for him. Three others have held the position of chancellor—George Washington, John Tyler and Hugh Blair Grigsby.

Dr. Pomfret, whose election was recommended by a special committee of the board, holds a Ph. D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania, is a Phi Beta Kappa and has had wide experience in teaching at the Universities of South Carolina, Vanderbilt, Florida State College for Women, University of Rochester and University of Iowa.

Cruiser Wichita Sunk, Tokyo Says

London, Aug. 17 (INS).—The Tokyo radio claimed today that a Japanese torpedo plane had sunk the United States heavy cruiser Wichita in the Battle of the Solomons, Reuters (British) News Agency reported.

(Editors note: The Navy Department, in one of its first communiques on the action in the Solomons, announced that an American cruiser had been lost but did not give the name of the ship.)

According to the Tokyo broadcast, the antiaircraft fire from the Wichita was "intense" and the pilot sent his plane almost to the level of the ship's bridge before launching his torpedo. It was added that the side of the vessel was "ripped open."

Accused Spy Goes on Trial

Nazis Lose Craft Off Dover

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 17.—A light German patrol boat was sunk and three others were severely damaged in a spirited clash with British light coastal craft in the Straits of Dover last night, the admiralty announced today.

All the British craft engaged in the clash returned to their base, but there were a few casualties aboard, the admiralty said.

The German force consisted of "five or six enemy R-boats," the communique said. The British set one afire and saw it sink. The German commanding officer was killed and 15 German sailors were picked up by the British.

Another enemy boat was rammed and so seriously damaged it was believed to have failed to reach base. Two more R-boats were severely damaged by gunfire, the admiralty added.

The R-boat, the British explained, is a German motor minesweeper, which usually is larger than the motor torpedo boat used by the Germans in the Channel. The designation was adopted from the German "raumen," meaning to clear away.

Spy Jury Gets Invisible Ink Device Details

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Aug. 17.—The Government opened its espionage case against Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr today by asserting the scholarly defendant tried to smuggle into this country on his person an ingeniously hidden device for making invisible ink.

The former Buffalo citizen went on trial before a jury of six men and six women and a male and a female alternate.

He was charged with conspiring with eight men in six foreign nations to forward to Germany information vital to the American war effort.

Assistant United States Attorney John Morrissey in opening his case said the Government intended to prove "every charge in the indictment." Conviction would leave to the presiding judge, William F. Smith, the question of imposing penalties ranging from 30 years to death at a place and in a manner to be designated by the Attorney General.

Morrissey said that United States customs agents at Jersey City, where Bahr was arrested aboard the diplomat exchange liner Drottningholm July 9, discovered the middle button had been removed from his coat and the thread used to replace it contained material for the manufacture of invisible ink.

In addition, Morrissey said, a clasp had been removed from his traveling bag and other materials for making the ink had been imbedded beneath the replaced clasp.

The 29-year-old former exchange student, an American citizen by virtue of his father's naturalization, seemed nervous but reserved throughout the first day. He conferred with court-appointed counsel, Frederic M. P. Pearse and Charles Hardin, during selection of jurors.

Crash Victim Asks $100,000 for Injuries

A damage suit for $100,000 against the Capital Transit Co. was filed in District Court yesterday by Mrs. Annie L. Belfield of 4531 Kansas Avenue Northwest, who claimed she was permanently disabled as a result of a broken neck received when a bus and her car collided February 25.

The plaintiff stated in the petition, filed by Attorney Joseph A. Solem, that the bus failed to halt at a stop sign.

Conspirator Denies Link With Pastor

Texas Doctor Who Aided Kunze's Flight Gets Grilling at Spy Trial

By the Associated Press

Hartford Conn., Aug. 17.—The defense in the Rev. Kurt E. B. Molzahn espionage conspiracy case rested late today, the fifteenth day of the trial, shortly after a confessed member of a spy ring dramatically declared that he never knew the Philadelphia clergyman.

Dr. Wolfgang Ebell, pop-eyed, diminutive El Paso, Tex., physician, who has pleaded guilty to charges of conspiring to furnish the Axis with American military secrets, swore that he knew of no connection between Molzahn and the conspiracy.

The 43-year-old doctor, subjected to a scathing cross-examination by Prosecutor Thomas J. Dodd, jr., told the jury that he had known Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former "Fuehrer" of the German American Bund since 1937, and the pastor did not, as the indictment charges, arrange in August 1941 for an Ebell-Kunze meeting.

Earlier, the 36-year-old Kunze, like Dr. Ebell a confessed member of a spy ring that Molzahn is accused of aiding, denied a Government attorney's charge that he knew from "secret sources" that the Japanese were going to raid the United States "months in advance" of the December 7 raid on Pearl Harbor.

The slim, moustached Kunze asserted that while he "knew of no attack" he had "reason to fear" that there would be war between America and the Axis.

Before court adjourned until tomorrow, brief testimony was heard from four Government rebuttal witnesses, one of them a Philadelphia dress shop supervisor, who testified that in the fall of 1939, while attending a supper in the Lutheran pastor's church, he found a standard bearing a swastika among furnishings that had been pushed aside to make room for the tables.

Dodd bitterly accused Dr. Ebell of being the Nazi's information agent for the southwestern section of the United States and of functioning as an "underground railroad" to help Nazi agents to cross the border into Mexico.

Pressed by the prosecutor, the witness stoutly denied the accusations, but finally admitted he had helped Kunze over the boundary line into Mexico, where the former bundist was captured early in July.

Inefficiency, Waste Laid to WPB Steel Unit

WPB for essential purposes. Steel consumers would then receive warrants entitling them to get so much of a certain kind of steel from a specified steel producer. Then, every steel mill would know where all its steel was destined, eliminating a large amount of waste and inefficiency.

One WPB official pointed out that the German government had used this warrant system with considerable success for some time. It would prevent steel from going into nonessential uses; it would prevent available steel-making facilities from being misused, and prevent part of our resources from being neglected, it is said.

It is understood that Libbey found large steel mills were wasting a portion of their capacity by rolling narrow types of steel on wide mills, while small steel mills were idle. Libbey does not ascribe this to any deliberate neglect of small mills by officials of the iron and steel branch, it is said. Instead, he is prepared to point out that branch officials have ignored small mills because they do not know what small mills can do—a crying reason for an inventory of all production resources.

Murray Plan Has Merit

A related report analyzing C. I. O. President Philip Murray's recommendations to eliminate bottlenecks in the steel production program has already been filed by Libbey with Wendell Lund, chief of the WPB labor production, division, and other WPB officials, it was learned. This report found considerable merit in many of Murray's proposals, along with some technical errors, it is understood. For this report, Libbey was lent to Lund by Nathan.

Murray had charged that the steel production program was suffering from three bottlenecks—a shortage of armor plate for the tank program, a shortage of steel plate for the shipbuilding program, and an inadequate stockpile of iron and steel scrap necessary to full production.

It is understood that Lund received a detailed analysis of Murray's proposals, an analysis which in large measure served to bear out the need for more adequate overall planning along the lines to be suggested in the more detailed, but still incomplete report.

Some of Findings Listed

The following are among the findings slated for inclusion in the larger report:

The country is short of steel production capacity, but the program can be improved considerably by converting more steel mills to the making of plate—needed for ships and tanks. Plate is the most critical type of steel today.

Raw materials for steel—pig iron and scrap—are limited, but the shortage can be considerably lessened by a greater effort to bring in scrap, by expanding the pig iron capacity of small producers.

Waste of steel resources through idle inventories, through faulty use of available steel-making equipment, through use of steel for nonessential purposes, through improper ordering of supplies, and through needless cross hauls in delivering, can all be eliminated through adequate overall planning, coupled with proper use of the proposed warrant system.

The priorities system has broken down as a result of an overloading of high priority ratings. Mills have more demands for steel at high priority ratings than they can fill, creating maldistribution and resultant shortages.

Steel shortages were almost inevitable as a result of the expanding war program, but the day of reckoning came too soon because of waste and maldistribution.

Production should be so concentrated under an overall plan that mills will do what they are most able to do. Thus, existing facilities would be able to produce more in the overall picture.

Greater use should be made of Bessemer process steel—a type whose capacity can be expanded, Libbey believes.

The reorganized iron and steel branch must get behind the scrap drive to make sure that steel production does not fall down because of scrap shortages.

Homeowners Picket Builder's Display House

Charging that developers of an Alexandria suburb have refused to heed their complaints of leaking basements, walls and roofs, two housewives yesterday established a "picket line" in front of a display home maintained by the builder.

A representative of the builder explained the apparent "leaks" actually were condensation resulting from recent heavy rains combined with high humidity in the basements of the houses.

driven off with a loss of at least 18 planes.

The following night, the Jap fleet of cruisers and destroyers attacked. Their objective was the force of loaded troop and supply ships, but our own warship fleet intercepted the Nipponese armada and engaged it in battle.

No details of this battle were given in the communique, except that the "close-range" and "heavy" fighting which ensued "resulted in the enemy being forced to retreat before reaching the vessel engaged in the landing operations."

From Japanese sources, however, has come a report that so thick and close-in was the fighting in this engagement that an American warship collided with a Nipponese man-o-war. This Tokyo account did not tell of the results of the collison, although subsequent enemy communiques have made fantastic claims of American losses.

Our Losses Probably Far Below Jap Claims

While admittedly the United States suffered considerable losses in personnel and perhaps ships in pressing the attack on the Solomons, they are expected to be far below Japanese claims.

Heavy losses must be reckoned with in any such offensive operations as these. They are the cost which must be paid for the capture of these strategic islands—which marks the first loss of captured terrain by the Japs and the first step taken by the United Nations on the long road toward Tokyo.

The text of the Navy communique, No. 107, follows:

"South Pacific area:

"1. It is now possible to issue some details of the attacks and landing operations which have been in progress in the Solomon Islands since the early morning of August 7 (local time).

"2. The attacks were a complete surprise to the enemy and 18 of their seaplanes were destroyed before they could get into action.

"3. Transport-born, amphibious forces of the United States Marine Corps made several landings on islands in the Gaudalcanal-Tulagi area. Enemy resistance was overcome and a number of Japanese prisoners were taken. The shore positions taken by United States forces have since been developed and are now well established.

"4. During these landing operations, cruisers and destroyers were so disposed as to protect our transports and cargo ships as they unloaded troops and equipment. While thus engaged on August 7 and August 8, our forces were attacked by enemy land based aircraft. These attacks were driven off and at least 18 more enemy planes destroyed while only minor damage was suffered by our forces.

"5. During the night of August 8-9 an enemy force of cruisers and destroyers attempted to attack our transports, cargo ships and supporting forces. This enemy force was intercepted and engaged by our cruisers and destroyers. The heavy fighting which followed resulted in the enemy being forced to retreat before reaching the vessels engaged in the landing operations. The close range fighting during this night engagement resulted in damage both to the enemy and to our forces. This night action is the only engagement between surface forces which has been fought to date in the Solomon Islands.

"6. It is impossible in night engagements to determine accurately the damage inflicted on the opposing force. No further statement is made at this time of the extent of damage to our forces because of the obvious value of such information to the enemy."

De Guzman's Hearing Thursday

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday set for Thursday at 10 a. m. the arraignment of Mimo De Guzman, 42-year-old Washington Filipino charged with violation of the Selective Service Act and complicity in a plot described by the FBI as a threat to our "internal security."

Guzman, arrested July 31 in New York, was to have been arraigned before Turnage yesterday, but Assistant United States Attorney John Conliff requested the continuance.

The Filipino is specifically charged with failure to return his draft questionnaire and failure to notify his local board of a change of address.

Allies' Fliers Again Batter Japs on Timor

By Lee Van Atta
International News Service Staff Writer

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters in Australia, Aug. 17.—United States Marines were believed tonight to have widened further the areas won in the strategic Solomon Islands, while Allied naval and air units kept Japanese reinforcements away and assured supply deliveries to the American landing parties.

American and Australian bombers, meantime, again blasted the enemy's invasion spearhead on the southeast shore of Timor Island, pointing at northwest Australia, and Allied land forces engaged in increasing clashes with the Japanese on New Guinea.

(The London Star in a special dispatch from Sydney, Australia, declared that "despite the cautious tone of official communiques, it seems clear that the Allies already have won in the land, sea and air operations in the Solomons the greatest victory yet achieved against the Japanese."

(Saying that "it seems reasonable to assume that the Allies have achieved their major initial objectives," the Star's Sydney correspondent cabled: "It must be realized that the United States' hold on this area cannot be secure until the Allied naval units inflict a crushing defeat on the main Japanese fleet or until it is possible to develop the newly won air bases to the stage when they will permit land-based aircraft there to beat off any sea attack.")

Bombers Remain Active

While not yet officially confirmed, indications were that the Leathernecks have clamped down a strong grip on the vital Tulagi harbor area in the southeastern Solomons, as well as on points along the southern coast of Florida Island just above Tulagi.

The tiny islets of Makambo and Gavutu were believed firmly in the possession of the Marines, while the large Kukum airdrome on Guadalcanal Island, to the south, also was reported captured.

Allied naval forces under Vice Admiral Robert Chormley, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's bombers, meantime, remained active in fending off enemy movements toward the Solomons and in keeping clear the lines of communications sustaining the embattled Marines.

(The naval correspondent of the post in Yorkshire, England, reported that reinforcements for the Marine landing units were "proceeding steadily." He said the Allied successes already accomplished may be regarded as "fulfillment of the first phase of the offensive against the long line of Japanese island bases threatening Australia.")

In the interior of New Guinea Island, meantime, Japanese land forces appeared to have intensified their thrusts at Allied lines south of Kokoda, possibly signifying the preliminaries to an enemy drive on the Allied coastal base of Port Moresby, less than 60 miles to the southwest.

At the same time, Allied bombers struck a destructive new blow at Japanese-held Timor Island, 500 miles northwest of Port Darwin.

was intended. As soon as the bill becomes law, he said, the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts will begin issuing checks to all dependents of enlisted men in the four lowest grades of the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, for whom applications for the allowances have been received and accepted.

After the start is made, additional dependents will begin to receive their checks as their applications are received by the department and approved, he said. No estimates were available about the number of dependents whose applications for monthly benefits had been approved, or about the total number of beneficiaries expected, the spokesman said.

First promise that the Navy would be able to start immediate payments came from Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, a leader in the Senate drive to remove the November 1 deadline. Clark said that James V. Forrestal, undersecretary of the Navy, had informed Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat) of North Carolina, that the Navy could make its payments now and recommended doing it for the sake of morale.

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah, however, warned that removing the deadline would introduce confusion into the law and hold out "a promise to the people of this country that can't be fulfilled."

The Navy, said Thomas, cannot pay on the basis of its present calculations, since they have been worked out according to the November 1 payment date, but would have to recalculate each individual payment.

"If the Navy has made its calculations on a date before November 1 the Navy has broken the law," said Thomas, "and the Undersecretary of the Navy is as guilty as anyone of holding out a promise that can't be fulfilled."

Recalculation of the paychecks and printing of new forms would take at least two weeks, said Thomas.

Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina of the Senate Military Affairs Committee voiced objections of the War Department against removing the November 1 payment date, and pointed out that the department still was 1000 persons short of the number needed to administer family allowance payments.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan answered that lifting the deadline would simply leave it to the War Department to decide when they would begin payments. "I want the congressional shackles removed so the War Department can act just as soon as they're ready to act," Vandenberg said.

Senator Clark said that some service men's dependents were being forced to rely on charity for their living expenses, and that many were in "dire need."

Postponement of the soldier's voting bill to Thursday was approved at the suggestion of Majority Leader Barkley, after he had joined with Senators Norris (Independent) of Nebraska and Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut, in questioning whether Congress would be within the Constitution in legislating on conduct of State elections.

Senator Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island, chairman of the committee on Privileges and Elections which held hearings on the vote bill, said that delay in its passage would be an injustice to millions of service men.

Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois said that Congress did have the power under the Constitution to approve the measure, and "we're legally and morally bound to give the fellow who's ready to give his life in the service of his country the right to vote."

Germans Cross Kuban River, Peril RedBlack Sea Base

flank.

The most ominous development in the fighting of the past 24 hours, however, was the admitted German break-through across the Kuban, bringing the foe within long-range artillery reach of Novorossisk, main station of the Soviet Black Sea fleet since the fall of Sevastopol.

The midnight war bulletin said "heavy fighting" was raging for possession of two unnamed towns on the south side of the Kuban, with Russian Cossack cavalry violently counterattacking in efforts to hurl the invaders back across the Kuban.

The enemy's crossing of the Kuban was achieved at tremendous cost in lives and material after numerous repeated attempts to force the river during the past week had been crushed.

The Germans apparently launched their supreme and successful attempt to span the waterline after shifting heavy forces from the captured Maikop oil area 60 miles north to the Krasnodar district.

Far to the southeast, meanwhile, furious 'defensive fighting' involved the hard-pressed Soviets throughout Monday in the Mineralnye Vody sector as the Nazis charged with phalanxes of tanks and motorized infantry repeatedly against the Russian defenses blocking their path to Grozny and the Caspian. In this area they appeared to have registered no appreciable gain for the past five days.

Southeast of Kletskaya which lies on the eastward bend of the Don 75 miles northwest of Stalingrad, at least 5000 Nazis were declared to have been slain and 30 of their tanks smashed in the past few days of fighting in a single sector, the midnight communique related.

The Soviets said they had repulsed repeated Nazi attempts to turn the Russian flanks in the Kletskaya area Monday.

The latest communique failed to disclose whether any further progress had been made by Russian troops in the area around Bryansk, 210 miles southwest of Moscow. Soviet forces, launching a new diversionary push, earlier were said to have seized advantageous positions from the Germans.

This advance was scored after the routing of an enemy battalion, the Soviet Monday communique announced. It added that in another sector of the Bryansk front 1450 Nazis had been killed as the Germans suffered a setback.

These fresh offensive thrusts, however, appeared as yet to have drawn away none of the high Nazi forces battering continually at the approaches to Stalingrad and toward the Black and Caspian seacoasts of the Caucasus.

No 'Black Market' In Steel, Says WPB

Warehouse Deals Come Under OPA, Investigators Say

The compliance branch of the War Production Board reported yesterday that although it failed to find any "black market" operations as a result of its investigation of charges made by officials of the Higgins Industries, Inc., New Orleans shipbuilders, it was nevertheless continuing the probe on the possibility that steel warehouses may have violated WPB quota regulations.

According to WPB, the investigation will center around steel warehouses named by Higgins' officials along the following three lines:

1. "If as Higgins charges, the warehouses of the country are bulging with steel of all types and sizes, this steel may have been received by the warehouses in violation of quota restrictions. An analysis of the reports compiled as a result of a recent compliance survey of steel warehouses will disclose whether or not such violations have occurred."

2. Higgins evidence indicates that some warehouses may have shipped greater than carload lots to Higgins without the express approval of the War Production Board, the compliance branch report said.

3. Warehouses mentioned by Higgins will also be investigated to see whether they have favored one customer ahead of another in violation of regulations. Some evidence of this resulting in a consent decree against two steel companies was recently uncovered, the report pointed out.

The "black market" charges were made by Frank Higgins, son of Andrew Jackson Higgins, the New Orleans shipbuilder, before a special House committee which met in New Orleans to investigate the shutdown of the half-completed Higgins shipyard by the Maritime Commission because of an alleged shortage of steel. Frank Higgins asserted that his company was able to get steel without specific authorizations by buying less than carload lots in the "black market" above prices normally paid for more than carload lots.

No "Black Market" Evidence

"Excluding possible violations of the price schedules prescribed by the Office of Price Administration," the report said, "the statements and information submitted by Higgins to representatives of the War Production Board and the other agencies participating offer no evidence of 'black market' operations as the term is commonly understood in this country and England. Higgins presented no evidence that scarce materials have been diverted from the war program, and all of the deliveries cited by Higgins were made pursuant to high-rated defense orders.

"It is true that certain of these deliveries appear to have been made at a price in excess of the OPA schedule for warehouse sales, and others appear to have been an evasion of the OPA regulations for the purpose of obtaining the less-than-carload or warehouse price. These possible violations are outside the jurisdiction of the War Production Board, and are presently being investigated by OPA."

War Sidelights

Japs Change Army Chiefs In China

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), Aug. 17 (AP).—The War Office announced today that Lieut. Gen. Jun Ushiroku, hitherto chief of staff of the Japanese armies in China, had been named commander in chief of central defense headquarters in Japan and raised to the rank of general. He was succeeded in the China post by Lieut. Gen. Shozo Kawabe.

The newspaper Asahi said the appointment was significant "with regard to the increased importance of defense of the mother country and especially of her east coast now that the first phase of war operations in great Asia has come to an end."

Sailors Save Mongrel

An East Coast Port, Aug. 17 (AP).—A mongrel pup named "Fausto," mascot of a torpedoed ship—has had his taste of war.

The dog, with 13 seamen, spent 15 days in an open lifeboat after the Uruguayan freighter Maldonado was sunk by a submarine west of Bermuda August 1. The boat was well-stocked with provisions, the Fourth Naval District said, and the party experienced "no particular hardships." They were landed here Saturday.

Acres of Devastation

London, Aug. 17 (AP).—Daylight photographs show areas of "complete destruction" totaling 135 acres in Mainz, German city blasted by R. A. F. raids the nights of August 11 and 12, the air ministry announced today.

"Great patches of devastation by fire and high explosive bombs" attested to the accuracy and effectiveness of the bombing which hit all parts of Mainz and its suburbs, the air ministry's news service said.

Mainz, the news service added, besides having important industries, is a garrison town with permanent barracks and military depots, many of which were destroyed or damaged extensively.

Satisfying Smokes

New York, Aug. 1 (INS).—The Cigar Institute of America announced today that 36 boxes of cigars were sent to Gen. Douglas MacArthur by the Republic of Cuba as a testimonial of admiration and friendly feelings of the Cuban people.

The institute added that General MacArthur had acknowledged the gift and quoted him as saying that he would smoke the cigars "with the greatest satisfaction and always with the delightful spirit of comradeship which animated you in sending them."

Older Women Find Positions In War Plants

To prove its belief that older women make good industrial workers, the Women's Bureau has requested its field staff to send in data on specific "elderly successes."

These three cases illustrate what is being found:

A 48-year-old housewife who had not been employed commercially since 1919—except for a try at selling Fuller brushes—took a training course in machine operation. She will go to work for a tool company at 70 cents an hour. The plant is within walking distance of her home, and both her children are in high school.

A 47-year-old housewife with no previous industrial work experience and with a 2-year high school education took a 120-hour training course in inspection work. She was employed by a tool company, also at 70 cents an hour.

A 52-year-old housewife with a grammar school education completed the inspection courses satisfactorily, but has not yet been employed because she has no birth certificate. She has a daughter who will enter nurses' training in September.

There should be no top age limit for women desiring to do war work, in the bureau's opinion. The old ones are "dependable and steady, and usually display better judgment—particularly in hazardous work—than very young workers," the bureau declares.

2 N.W. Streets Now Are One Way

Twenty-second Street Northwest, from Massachusetts to Pennsylvania Avenues, is now a one-way street northbound at all times, and Twenty-third Street Northwest, between the same streets is permanently southbound, effective yesterday, the Department of Vehicles and Traffic announced.

The changes were recommended in the 44 million dollar Whitehurst Highway planning survey, completed last year by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, to make a new open route between the Northwest sections of the city and downtown area, and to make a direct link from Massachusetts Avenue to Memorial Bridge.

Nazi Train Wrecked

London, Aug. 17 (AP).—Aneta, Netherlands news agency, quoted a Soviet information bureau report from Moscow today that a heavily laden German troop train collided with another train at a station near Groningen, in the northern Netherlands, causing serious damage and suspending traffic.

Five prominent Netherlanders wereexecuted by a Nazi firing squad Saturday as hostages after saboteurs whom the Germans blamed for a similar troop train wreck August 7 were not captured.

ARMY ROLE CALLS FOR DIFFERENT MAKE-UP—Corpl. Clark Gable, the movie star, who entered the Army Air Forces officer candidate school yesterday at Miami Beach, Fla., cuts off his mustache. He had to shave his upper lip because of regulations. Here, in uniform, he finishes the job

Crooner Will Serve As Band Master At San Pedro Base

By the Associated Press

Long Beach, Calif., Aug. 17.—Rudy Vallee today joined the Coast Guard as a band master with the rank of chief petty officer.

Lieut. Max Sturges, assistant personnel officer in the Long Beach Coast Guard office, said Vallee had been approved physically and "now is going through the details."

Vallee 41, enlisted in the Navy at the age of 15, just before World War I, and spent three months in the service before his age was discovered. He was shipped home. In 1934 he was commissioned a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve.

He will be stationed temporarily at the San Pedro operating base nad be in charge of the Coast Guard Band.

Gable Becomes Corporal, Loses His Moustache

Miami Beach, Fla., Aug. 17 (AP).—Broad-shouldered Clark Gable, who once drew fabulous sums for wearing uniforms in the movies, became a $66-a-month corporal in real life today—and plunged right into one of the Army's toughest training grinds.

A private for the duration of a transcontinental train trip, Gable, 41, was promoted as soon as he enrolled in the air forces officer candidate school. All students are corporals or sergeants.

After 12 weeks of getting up at 5:15 a. m. and working until dark, the actor will be graduated as a second lieutenant.

In accordance with regulations prohibiting such adornment for noncommissioned officers and men, Gable went to a barber shop and received a close shave.

The barber shaved off half the moustache and, for the benefit of news cameramen, Gable completed the job.

He was given a full Army outfit, including a pair of number 11 heavy duty, Government-issue shoes. His first lesson at the training school was instruction in how to make his bed.

Maurice Evans Made Captain

In Washington the appointment of Maurice Evans, noted Shakespe rean actor, as a captain in the Army Specialist Corps was announced by the War Department.

Evans, 41, has been assigned to the Seventh Service Command at Omaha, Nebr. His duties will include the promotion of amateur theatricals in Army posts remote from population centers where it is impossible to sponsor professional entertainment.

Autry Reports at Air Base

Santa Ana, Aug. 17 (AP). Gene Autry, the singing cowboy, has reported at the Santa Ana Army air base for basic training.

He enlisted in the Army Air Force at Chicago August 1 and was rated a technical sergeant. Autry had more than 200 hours in the air as a civilian flier.

Conrad was found by his wife last night when she returned home. According to police, he was seated in his automobile in a closed garage at the home with a hose attached to the exhaust pipe of the car extended into the automobile.

WLB Threatens Seizure of Munition Plant Which Defies Union Maintenance Order

A defiant munitions manufacturer who has refused to comply with a decision of the War Labor Board yesterday received a WLB ultimatum to accept its decision or have the matter turned over to the President for "appropriate action," resumably Government seizure and oeration of the plant.

The board sent its ultimatum to H. C. Dodge, president of the S. A. Woods Machine Co., Boston, Mass., who has refused to accept a board order granting maintenance of union membership to the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, and requiring the company and union to arbitrate all disputes arising out of changes in manufacturing methods.

A total of 650 employes are affected.

Acting for WLB, Public Member Wayne L. Morse telegraphed Dodge the ultimatum accusing him of "dilatory tactics" tantamount to a "management strike against the Government" and asked him to "patriotically accept the order . . . rather than hinder the Government efforts to win the war."

No Work Stoppage Involved

Last week, the President acted rapidly to back up a board decision by ordering the Navy to take over the General Cable plant at Bayonne, N. J., after 1000 members of the A. F. L. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers engaged in an outlaw strike against a WLB decision turning down a wage increase.

If the President follows a similar course in the S. A. Woods case, it will mark the first time that he has acted to take over a plant because of a dispute between labor and management where no strike or work stoppage was involved. In all previous cases, whether involving defiance by an employer or by an employe group, a work stoppage threatening war production was involved.

However, board officials doubted that this would deter the Chief Executive, since it was assumed that continued refusal of the company to obey the board order would result in a strike threat by the union to force the company to comply.

Dodge had asked the board to attempt to enforce its order in the courts, thus providing a test case of its authority to order union maintenance and compulsory arbitration.

Stating that Dodge's request "is denied," Morse pointed out "that the power of the War Labor Board stems from the war powers of the President and its decisions are in execution of these powers."

"The union security and arbitration provisions in the board's order affecting your company are identical with those in the directive orders of the board in many other cases, all of which have been accepted patriotically by other employers who recognize that during wartime their duty is to cooperate with the Government rather than hinder the Government's attempt to win the war," Morse stated.

"If you continue with your defiance of the board's decision, you must be considered as engaging in an employer strike against the Government in time of war. . . . Our Army needs the munitions produced by your company, and you should not make it necessary for the Government to operate your plant in order to get the munitions."

At the same time, Secretary Knox said that the Navy's seizure of the General Cable Co. plant last Friday "must under no circumstances be construed as an indorsement of the attitude of the group of the employes who precipitated such action."

Knox made the statement in a telegram to Michael Petrakian, employes' leader who had wired President Roosevelt a promise that the workers would double their efforts now in order to offset the loss in production caused by the work stoppage last week.

Knox's telegram to Petrakian declared that the workers' action was "a dangerous threat to the success of our national effort in this critical emergency."

"The Navy has too much fighting to do to be managing plants which should be operating in the American way, under their own management, Knox said, "and I am sure the men will want to relieve the Navy promptly of this responsibility."

Meanwhile, the board prepared to hold a public hearing today on the dispute between the United States Steel Co. and the C. I. O. United Steel Workers of America which revolves around application of the board's "little steel" order to the giant steel company.

Since it is generally assumed that the board order in this case will follow the pattern of the little steel decision, the main issue in dispute is the amount of retroactive pay increase to which the union is entitled. A total of 175,000 little steel workers received a 44 cents a day pay boost, retroactive to early February, union maintenance, checkoff and daily minimum wage guarantee.

In another steel case, WLB yesterday directed the Lebanon Steel Co., Lebanon, Pa., to bargain collectively with the C. I. O. steel union in accordance with a decision of the National Labor Relations Board, as affirmed by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Commenting on a company contention that the NLRB decision was in error, Board Chairman William H. Davis stated that WLB assumed NLB decisions to be valid unless "reversed by a superior authority."

Navy Recruiting Good in District

The Washington office of the United States Recruiting Service yesterday reported "good results" in the first day of a Nation-wide drive to recruit one million Americans for service with the Navy.

The drive will last eight weeks, a Navy spokesman said. He added that although the goal was set for one million men, the Navy would take "as many as we can get."

Applicants are requested to go to the recruiting office at 1320 G Street Northwest.

The only discussion at the election was why the effective date should be September 1, and not immediately, Hankin said. He reported that Kutz said, "It will serve our purpose best," and when questioned as to what purpose, replied, "to avoid giving the impression that we did this to influence impending cases."

On the P. U. C. docket between now and the first of the month are a hearing on Washington Gas Light Co. rates, to be held this morning, and a hearing on the Hankin taxi-zone map, scheduled for August 27. The question of P. U. C.'s responsibility in the increase of fatalities involving streetcars and buses might be considered a pending case, since Hankin had announced on Saturday that his efforts to get P. U. C. action on that had been blocked by his colleagues.

This issue and the overruling by Flanagan and Kutz of Hankin's statement last Friday that today's hearing would be postponed in order to let the company counsel prepare testimony for certain questions that Hankin wished to ask were seen as the final sparks that touched off an explosion which had been threatening since the first week that Hankin was in office last November.

Of Long Standing

According to Hankin, the ill-feeling had developed even before he took office.

"A few days before I took office," he said last night, "General Kutz sent the executive secretary to me with a notice that he was apprised by the general counsel that we would not elect a chairman until a third member of the commission was appointed. On the day I took office General Kutz told me he had been advised by Mr. Harrison (corporation counsel for the P. U. C.) that we should wait before electing a chairman."

Pointing out that from the death of P. U. C. Chairman Wiley Elgin in February, 1941, until the Senate's confirmation of himself in November, the commission had lacked a quorum, Hankin said that he felt the commission needed an active head, and, he added, "my reason was that I felt that in the position of chairman I would be more in a position to protect the public interest, unpleasant as that position often is."

Later, however, he said: "Now I feel somewhat relieved, because with my determination to work in the public interest, and without the fetters of chairmanship, I feel that I shall be able to perform my work more freely and perhaps more effectively."

Hankin has frequently charged his colleagues with being too willing to accept the utility companies' requests without further consideration.

Friction from the Start

Saturday, in commenting on the majority ruling against his announcement of the postponement of the Washington Gas Light Co. case, Hankin said: "Once again there seems to be an attempt in this commission to be guided only by the testimony offered by the utilities company."

He referred reporters to his dissenting opinion in the application of the Potomac Electric Power Co., in which he had written that apparently all a utility company had to do was to ask and the P. U. C. would accede to its wishes.

The first blows between Hankin and Kutz were struck a bare week after the chairman came into office, when at the first hearing on the new taxi rates, he told the drivers that he would have given them a temporary rate of 30 cents for the first zone, but for Kutz's insistence that the old rates continue until the conclusion of the investigation. Kutz was then singled out by the cab drivers for threats and appeals, until finally he capitulated.

During the taxicab crisis in June, when the corporation counsel ruled that a court appeal by the cab drivers' union against the P. U. C. order for new zones and rates stayed the commission's order, Hankin advised cab drivers to go on and use the new rates anyway. Flanagan and Kutz stated that the drivers should abide by the corporation counsel's opinion.

Another Dissention Pending

Still another dissenting opinion from Hankin is to be handed down in the case of the citizens associations' application for three-for-a-quarter streetcar tokens. The P. U. C. has already ruled against this appeal, Hankin said, but the order has not been issued because he has not had time to write his minority opinion.

Hankin, 48, a native of the Ukraine, came to America at the age of 13. A graduate of New York public schools, New York University and Harvard University, he taught philosophy and mathematics at George Washington University. He went with the Federal Power Commission in 1937 as special counsel. He was nominated to his present position by the President on March 3, 1941, but was not confirmed for eight months, while charges that he had engaged in Communist activities were investigated.

Flanagan, 45, attended Boston, New York and Georgetown Universities. A former utilities executive, he served on financial missons in Persia and in Brazil. He was once employed by Stone and Webster, utilities engineering firm; and from 1935 until he was sworn into the Public Utilities Commission in February, he was a supervising analyst with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

14 Years for Mrs. Tracy In DeYoung MurderCase

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Harriett Tracy, 72, was sentenced today to 14 years in prison on a charge of murdering Morris De Young, 66, last April 30.

Mrs. Tracy, housekeeper for De Young, claimed she acted in self defense. Thirty years ago Mrs. Tracy was tried on a charge of murdering her husband, but was acquitted.

Cop Cracks Big Case—A Glass One

The telegraph news wires carried these briefs yesterday:

In Kansas City, Patrolman William D. Replogle cracked a case—a big one.

It was a glass showcase the 190-pound policeman was using as a makeshift desk while he took down notes from Mrs. Julia Lumpkin, whose purse had been snatched.

The thief got away. Patrolman Replogle was helped from a jumbled assortment of neckties, suspenders and belts—sprinkled with broken glass. He wasn't hurt.

A thief broke into a Portland, Oreg., house. Then he opened the refrigerator, let the dog out of the basement and gave him a choice T-bone steak. The dog remained silent.

Red flannels for New Yorkers? Room temperatures are likely to hover around 55 degrees this winter because of the fuel shortage, says Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, professor of public health at Yale Medical School, who adds that residents of New York would have to get acquainted with heavier underwear or go cold. He addressed a meeting sponsored by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

In Philadelphia the cops broke up a game of cops and robbers when neighbors complained that the play was too realistic.

Police said the cop, 15 years old, had a blackjack, and the robber, also 15, was armed with three revolvers, one loaded. The arsenal—which the boys said they "borrowed" from their fathers—was confiscated.

George Meizger of Philadelphia, who's been on the same job 72 years, thinks he may be oldest war worker in the Nation.

Meizger, a blacksmith in a factory, helped make dies for the Government during the Spanish-American War. He's doing it again now—at 85.

Then he discovered the sign: "Do not enter this door if undressed."

Ex-Convict Indicted Twice As Slayer of Man, Woman

An indictment charging George Abston, 37, Negro, with second degree murder, and another reviving a year-old charge of manslaughter against the same man were among 48 true bills returned yesterday by the District grand jury.

Also indicted, on a charge of first degree murder, was Woodrow McCants, 24, Negro, of 635 Columbia Road Northwest, in connection with the fatal beating and strangulation July 11 of William B. Hulse, 62, whom detectives described as a "numbers game" operator. The death occurred at Hulse's home, 318 Eleventh Street Southwest.

Abston, who served more than two years in prison for beating to death a 33-year-old Negro woman in October of 1933, is accused of fatally shooting Eugene Chapman, 38, of 1201 Twenty-first Street Northwest June 2, 1941, and killing 29-year-old Beatrice L. Hewitt of 510 First Street Northwest, by hitting her on the head with a glass pitcher.

On May 11, the grand jury returned an ignoramus in the Chapman case, but the charge was revived as manslaughter when Assistant United States Attorney Allen Krouse presented the evidence again last week.

The grand jury also indicted Henry Berman, 42, a loan broker of 4821 Third Street Northwest, on charges of housebreaking and larceny in connection with the theft of 13 tires from Lehman's Super Service Station, Twelfth and K Streets Northwest, July 23.

Berman was arrested August 4 on a complaint that 38 new tires had been stolen from the station, but only 13 were recovered, and Berman was not charged with larceny of the other 25.

Among the 12 charges ignored yesterday were those of rape and assault with a dangerous weapon against Everett G. Santmyer, 22-year-old soldier stationed with the Anacostia infantry.

Other true bills returned:

Assault with a dangerous weapon—Ethel L. Carter, James Parker, Russell Taylor, Joseph A. Shelton, Abraham Lock, Lee Hunt and James Brooks.

Unauthorized use of an automobile—Clifton E. Lomax, Henry H. McIntosh, John L. Perry and Russell Weedon; stealing automobile accessories—Charles Johnson, Ralph M. Brooks, John M. Bland and James L. Davis.

Grand larceny—Walter Pozzie, William Wailes, Maurice M. Hawkins, Wilbur W. Thacker and William D. Johnson; grand larceny and larceny after trust—Braxton Patterson.

Robbery—Booker T. Washington, Goldie Lee Miller, jr., William V. Fisher, Marie Smith, Rudolph W. Travers, David Ross and Homer Sneed, jr.; receiving stolen property—John D. Matthews and Julia Carter.

Violation of gambling laws—John Benton, Cleveland Howard, Robert Herald, Charles Campbell, Marie Brooks, Flossie Redman, Isaac D. Singleton, Lillie Hoover, Johnsie Mitchell, Gus Pappas, John Chronis, Marcus C. Canellos, Mamie Bennett and Alexander Apostolos.

Pandering—Truman A. Tarman; embezzlement—William S. Barlor; violation of the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937—James Williams; violation of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940—Edward George Banker; second degree murder—William Simons.

Hollywood Stars To Shine in Drive For War Bonds

More than 40 of Hollywood's biggest names will appear in more than 300 cities, towns and crossroads places in September in a drive to sell a billion dollars worth of war bonds, it was announced here yesterday.

Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild, will appear in Washington August 31 in a premiere appearance of the stars-on-tours. The Motion Pictures and Special Events Section of the Treasury War Savings Staff have not announced where the premiere will be held.

"These September tours represent the greatest combined participation ever engaged in by the motion picture industry at any one time and for any one national project," it was said yesterday by Carlton Duffus of the war savings staff.

Brazilian lives.

(The United States merchantman reported lost by the U. S. Navy was sunk late in July off the northern coast of South America with the loss of 11 out of 47 men.

(The ship went down three minutes after a torpedo hit her. Members of the crew were questioned by the submarine commander, who gave them supplies, first aid, directions and his regrets for what he said in a Hamburg accent was "the fortune of war.")

(The men were picked up in two hours by a Spanish vessel and landed at a Caribbean Island.

(The Panamanian ship was torpedoed and sunk in June, in the Caribbean area.)

(First word of the sinking of the Baependy came in a dispatch from Montevideo, Uruguay, which said the Brazilian Embassy there had announced the loss of the ship, described as a transport, with 700 or 800 troops.

(Later the Brazilian Ambassador to Argentina, Jose de Paula Rodriguez Alves, announced he had telephoned the embassy in Montevideo and had been told no announcement of the sinking was made there. He did not, however, deny the sinking.)

"Our country, within its traditions, does not flinch before such brutality and the government is examining methods to take in the face of these events," said a statement issued by the Department of Press and Propaganda.

"The population should remain calm and confident in the assurance that crimes practiced against the lives and goods of Brazilians will not go unpunished."

The sinkings brought to 18 the number of Brazilian vessels attacked and sunk for a total of more than 80,000 tons. Prior to today's announcement Brazil had lost 13 vessels. Another was torpedoed and shelled off the Brazilian coast but reached port after a five-day battle with attackers and a ship-board fire. Losses prior to today numbered 130 lives. The loss in lives in the new sinkings was not announced.

normal conditions. But, with the national income at a high level, civilians will want to buy 14 billion pounds. The result: a shortage of three billion pounds.

Hendrickson said three things should be done:

"1. We need to keep livestock production at high levels.

"2. We need price ceilings on wholesale and retail meat prices to avoid inflation.

"3. We need some system perhaps rationing, meatless days, a combination of the two, or something else—to assure equitable distribution of what will be a short supply of meat."

"It apears that rationing of meat might be one of the logical steps to solve the meat problems," he stated. "It also appears entirely logical pending the time rationing might be instituted that meatless days each week might be requested of the public by an appropriate Governmental authority."

Army Orders Sharp Curb on Publicity

Miss Kellems Will Run for Congress

Miss Kellems, attractive, thirtyish president of a Westport cable grip manufacturing company, yesterday formally announced her candidacy for the Republican Congressional nomination in the fourth Connecticut District. Many Officers Face Transfer to Line Duty in Shake-up

The Army made public yesterday an order to military commanders for a sharp curtailment and reorganization of public relations activities by October 1.

In line with Secretary Stimson's announcement last Thursday that the size of ublic relations staffs would be reduced, the order, dated August 14, specified maximum sizes for staffs outside Washington and for some in the Capital, and centralized all such functions in the Bureau of Public Relations, headed by Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles.

Stimson said public relations officers in Washington functioning outside the Public Relations Bureau numbered more than 100, and that in the reorganization about 75 per cent of them would be assigned to duty with troops.

No Place For News "Promotion"

The Secretary said the Army had no place for "promotion of news," and the formal order to commanders said that the rapid expansion of the War Department and the Army "have contributed to an excessive development of public relations activities."

Surles was directed to give the ground forces, the air forces and the services of supply "adequate representation" within his bureau, in place of the large independent staffs now used by these headquarters. However, each of these three divisions of the Army was authorized to establish an office of technical information with not more than four officers and eight enlisted men or civilian employes.

"Army ground forces commands, Army Air Forces commands, defense commands, service commands and Administrative and Supply Services, Services of Supply," the order said, "will restrict their public relations activities so that not more than two officers and four civilian employes or enlisted men will be employed in each office, command or agency.

Each According to Size

"Training centers, replacement training centers, schools and miscellaneous installations whose strength exceeds 5000 men will operate their public relations activities so that the services of not more than two officers and two civilians or enlisted men will be required.

"Organizations and installations having a strength of less than 5000 men will conduct their public relations activities so that the services of not more than one officer and one civilian employe or enlisted man will be required.

In small commands and installations every effort will be made to conduct public relations activities in such a manner that the work may be performed as a part-time additional duty, subordinate to more important military assignments."

House Gets Sanitation, Medical Bills

Two District bills, recently asked of Congress by the Commissioners, were introduced in the House yesteday by Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee.

One would provide swifter and more stringent procedure for the condemnation of unsanitary buildings in the city, while the second would permit the issuance of temporary medical licenses in the District during the war.

Principal feature of the condemnation bill is the provision of a 10-day jail sentence which would be imposed at the court's discretion on violators of the sanitary regulations. Present law pemits only a maximum $300 fine, which local authorities say is not a sufficient deterrent in many cases.

Other sections of the measure are aimed at speeding up the condemnations—trimming down legal time limits, simplifying appeal methods, and reducing the time in which a condemned building must be emptied of inhabitants.

The medical bill is described as an effort to relieve the threatened shortage of doctors here, as well as to afford relief for refugee physicians and others who cannot meet the regular license requirements because of emergency conditions.

It would allow the Commission on Licensure to issue temporary permits—valid until six months after the war—when applicants satisfy the examiners that they have the requisite education and profeissional experience.

Bennett's Backers Fail to Vote

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 17.—Tammany Hall's executive committee late today adopted a resolution supporting United States Senator James M. Mead for the gubernatorial nomination.

The committee's action, all but ruling out possibility of a compromise and presaging a last-ditch fight betwen Mead and Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., came as State party leaders awaited a conference tomorrow that may lift the curtain on the delegate strength of the two candidates.

Unless opposing party leaders agree on a single candidate at the conference called for tomorrow night, by James A. Farley, it appeared certain that the Democratic convention, opening in Brooklyn Wednesday, would be split in its first floor fight in 20 years.

According to Tammany Leader Michael J. Kennedy, the Mead resolution was unanimously agreed to with two district leaders, Daniel J. Finn, jr. of the First, and Herbert L. Bruce of the Twenty-first, recorded as not voting.

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska yesterday said that despite the "beautiful remarks" Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois made in the Senate urging him to seek reelection, "I don't expect to be a candidate."

"In view of all the circumstances and my 81 years, I don't think I ought to run again," Senator Norris said. "I do appreciate what Senator Lucas said and I appreciate the many letters I've received urging me to run, but I don't intend to become a candidate."

Senator Norris will round out his fortieth consecutive year in Congress next January, having served in the House ten years before entering the Senate. He always has been a liberal.

Tax Experts Quiz Fish on Secret Deal

3. Whether there was any attempt to evade payment of income tax, such as would require prosecution. The penalty, upon conviction, is $10,000 fine, five years in prison, or both.

Fish might not be liable for taxes if he suffered losses during 1939 which would offset the money he got from Trujillo. When the secret deal came out, he claimed that his $8400 investment in the Nepaug Oil Co., Houston, Tex., was a dead loss.

If Fish was only an agent for Trujillo, the money he got from the Latin ruler would not have been taxable. And it might seem that, if he did suffer losses enough to offset the money he got from Trujillo, he would have reported such losses when he filed his 1939 income tax report. Then they would have offset some of his $10,000 salary as a Congressman and the more than $12,000 he got out of his insurance business.

The saving to Fish on his income tax would have been a tidy piece of change.

The $25,000 was paid Fish in the form of a credit subject to his order in the National City Bank, New York. He transferred $4100 to his own bank in Washington soon after he came back from a gala reception in Berlin, after which he declared Hitler's demands on Poland were "just."

This $4100, too, Fish said he could, and would explain to the income tax agents who, he said, were not investigating his affairs. He claimed that instead of making any money out of what he called his agency for Trujillo, he lost $3000 or $3000 of his "own."

NUMBER 57 ★ Interesting facts about the world's most versatile food ★ 7 lists of real money-saving foods ★ A four-part story about a great discovery

Things you may not know and should . . . about tomatoes

An article prepared by the Safeway Homemakers' Bureau

Tomatoes are without question the most versatile of all foods. They have a place at every meal—tomato juice, soup, salad, sandwiches, sauces, relishes—and they are equally good cooked or uncooked.

Tomato connoisseurs say the best way to enjoy them is to first scald them, then chill, peel, slice, and salt them. But there are many other ways, too.

Tomatoes are wonderful for adding sparkle to other foods—meats, macaroni and spaghetti dishes, and vegetable casseroles. You'll find that round steak, pork or veal chops and steaks, shoulder lamb chops, and similar cuts of meat are more tender and flavorful when braised in tomato juice or tomato soup instead of water.

Another thing—tomatoes not only taste good, they're also rich in Vitamins A and C. Vitamin C, often so elusive, is protected by the natural tomato acid, so that you can scald, cook, and can tomatoes without sacrificing much of the vitamin.

This is the season when tomatoes are ripe and juicy in most parts of the country, and it's a good time to put up tomato juice. The juice is almost as versatile as tomatoes themselves. Serve it hot or cold, as is or highly seasoned, or combined with other liquids. For peppy flavor, add lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce. For different-tasting cocktails, combine tomato juice with equal amounts of chilled pineapple, grapefruit, or sauerkraut juice, or with hot or chilled clam juice, consomme, or bouillon. Or make tomato juice into aspic.

TOMATO JUICE

10 lbs. tomatoes — 2 tsps. salt

Wash and core but do not peel tomatoes. Cut in eighths. Place in large 8-qt. kettle; add 2 cups water; cover; boil 10 minutes. Put through sieve to remove seeds. Add salt and heat to boiling. Pour into hot sterilized jars or bottles; seal; and pasteurize (directions follow). Makes about 7 pts.

Bottling and Pasteurization: Do not use lids with zinc tops. Wash jars thoroughly; sterilize by placing in boiling water for 10 minutes. Heat juice to 175° F. to 180° F. Pour into hot jars, filling just to 1½ inches from the top to allow room for expansion. Seal at once, according to type of lid. Place hot jars in water which has been heated to 160° F. to 185° F. Stand jars upright on rack; have completely covered with water. Heat water to 175° F. to 185° F. and hold temperature 30 minutes. Do not heat higher than 185° F. Remove immediately from hot water. Test seals for tightness. Let cool undisturbed in place free from draft. Then wipe off and store.

The only discussion at the election was why the effective date should be September 1, and not immediately, Hankin said. He reported that Kutz said, "It will serve our purpose best," and when questioned as to what purpose, replied, "to avoid giving the impression that we did this to influence impending cases."

On the P. U. C. docket between now and the first of the month are a hearing on Washington Gas Light Co. rates, to be held this morning, and a hearing on the Hankin taxi-zone map, scheduled for August 27. The question of P. U. C.'s responsibility in the increase of fatalities involving streetcars and buses might be considered a pending case, since Hankin had announced on Saturday that his efforts to get P. U. C. action on that had been blocked by his colleagues.

This issue and the overruling by Flanagan and Kutz of Hankin's statement last Friday that today's hearing would be postponed in order to let the company counsel prepare testimony for certain questions that Hankin wished to ask were seen as the final sparks that touched off an explosion which had been threatening since the first week that Hankin was in office last November.

Of Long Standing

According to Hankin, the ill-feeling had developed even before he took office.

"A few days before I took office," he said last night, "General Kutz sent the executive secretary to me with a notice that he was apprised by the general counsel that we would not elect a chairman until a third member of the commission was appointed. On the day I took office General Kutz told me he had been advised by Mr. Harrison (corporation counsel for the P. U. C.) that we should wait before electing a chairman."

Pointing out that from the death of P. U. C. Chairman Wiley Elgin in February, 1941, until the Senate's confirmation of himself in November, the commission had lacked a quorum, Hankin said that he felt the commission needed an active head, and, he added, "my reason was that I felt that in the position of chairman I would be more in a position to protect the public interest, unpleasant as that position often is."

Later, however, he said: "Now I feel somewhat relieved, because with my determination to work in the public interest, and without the fetters of chairmanship, I feel that I shall be able to perform my work more freely and perhaps more effectively."

Hankin has frequently charged his colleagues with being too willing to accept the utility companies' requests without further consideration.

Friction from the Start

Saturday, in commenting on the majority ruling against his announcement of the postponement of the Washington Gas Light Co. case, Hankin said: "Once again there seems to be an attempt in this commission to be guided only by the testimony offered by the utilities company."

He referred reporters to his dissenting opinion in the application of the Potomac Electric Power Co., in which he had written that apparently all a utility company had to do was to ask and the P. U. C. would accede to its wishes.

The first blows between Hankin and Kutz were struck a bare week after the chairman came into office, when at the first hearing on the new taxi rates, he told the drivers that he would have given them a temporary rate of 30 cents for the first zone, but for Kutz's insistence that the old rates continue until the conclusion of the investigation. Kutz was then singled out by the cab drivers for threats and appeals, until finally he capitulated.

During the taxicab crisis in June, when the corporation counsel ruled that a court appeal by the cab drivers' union against the P. U. C. order for new zones and rates stayed the commission's order, Hankin advised cab drivers to go on and use the new rates anyway. Flanagan and Kutz stated that the drivers should abide by the corporation counsel's opinion.

Another Dissention Pending

Still another dissenting opinion from Hankin is to be handed down in the case of the citizens associations' application for three-for-a-quarter streetcar tokens. The P. U. C. has already ruled against this appeal, Hankin said, but the order has not been issued because he has not had time to write his minority opinion.

Hankin, 48, a native of the Ukraine, came to America at the age of 13. A graduate of New York public schools, New York University and Harvard University, he taught philosophy and mathematics at George Washington University. He went with the Federal Power Commission in 1937 as special counsel. He was nominated to his present position by the President on March 3, 1941, but was not confirmed for eight months, while charges that he had engaged in Communist activities were investigated.

Flanagan, 45, attended Boston, New York and Georgetown Universities. A former utilities executive, he served on financial missons in Persia and in Brazil. He was once employed by Stone and Webster, utilities engineering firm; and from 1935 until he was sworn into the Public Utilities Commission in February, he was a supervising analyst with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

14 Years for Mrs. Tracy In DeYoung MurderCase

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Harriett Tracy, 72, was sentenced today to 14 years in prison on a charge of murdering Morris De Young, 66, last April 30.

Mrs. Tracy, housekeeper for De Young, claimed she acted in self defense. Thirty years ago Mrs. Tracy was tried on a charge of murdering her husband, but was acquitted.

Cop Cracks Big Case— A Glass One

The telegraph news wires carried these briefs yesterday:

In Kansas City, Patrolman William D. Replogle cracked a case—a big one.

It was a glass showcase the 190-pound policeman was using as a makeshift desk while he took down notes from Mrs. Julia Lumpkin, whose purse had been snatched.

The thief got away. Patrolman Replogle was helped from a jumbled assortment of neckties, suspenders and belts—sprinkled with broken glass. He wasn't hurt.

A thief broke into a Portland, Oreg., house. Then he opened the refrigerator, let the dog out of the basement and gave him a choice T-bone steak. The dog remained silent.

Red flannels for New Yorkers? Room temperatures are likely to hover around 55 degrees this winter because of the fuel shortage, says Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, professor of public health at Yale Medical School, who adds that residents of New York would have to get acquainted with heavier underwear or go cold. He addressed a meeting sponsored by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

In Philadelphia the cops broke up a game of cops and robbers when neighbors complained that the play was too realistic.

Police said the cop, 15 years old, had a blackjack, and the robber, also 15, was armed with three revolvers, one loaded. The arsenal—which the boys said they "borrowed" from their fathers—was confiscated.

George Meizger of Philadelphia, who's been on the same job 72 years, thinks he may be oldest war worker in the Nation.

Meizger, a blacksmith in a factory, helped make dies for the Government during the Spanish-American War. He's doing it again now—at 85.

The sign over a door in the medical department of the induction center at Spokane, Wash., was highly efficient until a recruit, blind in one eye, approached it from his sightless side. Clad in his birthday suit, he popped through the door into a room full of stenographers, and hurried right out again. Then he discovered the sign: "Do not enter this door if undressed."

Ex-Convict Indicted Twice As Slayer of Man, Woman

An indictment charging George Abston, 37, Negro, with second degree murder, and another reviving a year-old charge of manslaughter against the same man were among 48 true bills returned yesterday by the District grand jury.

Also indicted, on a charge of first degree murder, was Woodrow McCants, 24, Negro, of 635 Columbia Road Northwest, in connection with the fatal beating and strangulation July 11 of William B. Hulse, 62, whom detectives described as a "numbers game" operator. The death occurred at Hulse's home, 318 Eleventh Street Southwest.

Abston, who served more than two years in prison for beating to death a 33-year-old Negro woman in October of 1933, is accused of fatally shooting Eugene Chapman, 38, of 1201 Twenty-first Street Northwest June 2, 1941, and killing 29-year-old Beatrice L. Hewitt of 510 First Street Northwest, by hitting her on the head with a glass pitcher.

On May 11, the grand jury returned an ignoramus in the Chapman case, but the charge was revived as manslaughter when Assistant United States Attorney Allen Krouse presented the evidence again last week.

The grand jury also indicted Henry Berman, 42, a loan broker of 4821 Third Street Northwest, on charges of housebreaking and larceny in connection with the theft of 13 tires from Lehman's Super Service Station, Twelfth and K Streets Northwest, July 23.

Berman was arrested August 4 on a complaint that 38 new tires had been stolen from the station, but only 13 were recovered, and Berman was not charged with larceny of the other 25.

Among the 12 charges ignored yesterday were those of rape and assault with a dangerous weapon against Everett G. Santmyer, 22-year-old soldier stationed with the Anacostia infantry.

Other true bills returned:

Assault with a dangerous weapon—Ethel L. Carter, James Parker, Russell Taylor, Joseph A. Shelton, Abraham Lock, Lee Hunt and James Brooks.

Unauthorized use of an automobile—Clifton E. Lomax, Henry H. McIntosh, John L. Ferry and Russell Weedon; stealing automobile accessories—Charles Johnson, Ralph M. Brooks, John M. Bland and James L. Davis.

Grand larceny—Walter Pearle, William Waites, Maurice M. Hawkins, Wilbur W. Thacker and William D. Johnson; grand larceny and larceny after trust—Braxton Patterson.

Robbery—Booker T. Washington, Goldie Lee Miller, jr., William V. Fisher, Marie Smith, Rudolph W. Travers, David Ross and Homer Snead, jr.; receiving stolen property—John D. Matthews and Julia Carter.

Pandering—Truman A. Tarman; embezzlement—William S. Barker; violation of the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937—James Williams; violation of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940—Edward George Banks; second degree murder—William Simone.

Hollywood Stars To Shine in Drive For War Bonds

More than 40 of Hollywood's biggest names will appear in more than 300 cities, towns and crossroads places in September in a drive to sell a billion dollars worth of war bonds, it was announced here yesterday.

Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild, will appear in Washington August 31 in a premiere appearance of the stars-on-tours. The Motion Pictures and Special Events Section of the Treasury War Savings Staff have not announced where the premiere will be held.

"These September tours represent the greatest combined participation ever engaged in by the motion picture industry at any one time and for any one national project," it was said yesterday by Carlton Duffus of the war savings staff.

Brazilian lives.

(The United States merchantman reported lost by the U. S. Navy was sunk late in July off the northern coast of South America with the loss of 11 out of 47 men.

(The ship went down three minutes after a torpedo hit her. Members of the crew were questioned by the submarine commander, who gave them supplies, first aid, directions and his regrets for what he said in a Hamburg accent was "the fortune of war.")

(The men were picked up in two hours by a Spanish vessel and landed at a Caribbean Island.

(The Panamanian ship was torpedoed and sunk in June, in the Caribbean area.)

(First word of the sinking of the Baependy came in a dispatch from Montevideo, Uruguay, which said the Brazilian Embassy there had announced the loss of the ship, described as a transport, with 700 or 800 troops.

(Later the Brazilian Ambassador to Argentina, Jose de Paula Rodriguez Alves, announced he had telephoned the embassy in Montevideo and had been told no announcement of the sinking was made there. He did not, however, deny the sinking.)

"Our country, within its traditions, does not flinch before such brutality and the government is examining methods to take in the face of these events," said a statement issued by the Department of Press and Propaganda.

"The population should remain calm and confident in the assurance that crimes practiced against the lives and goods of Brazilians will not go unpunished."

The sinkings brought to 18 the number of Brazilian vessels attacked and sunk for a total of more than 80,000 tons. Prior to today's announcement Brazil had lost 13 vessels. Another was torpedoed and shelled off the Brazilian coast but reached port after a five-day battle with attackers and a ship-board fire. Losses prior to today numbered 130 lives. The loss in lives in the new sinkings was not announced.

normal conditions. But, with the national income at a high level, civilians will want to buy 14 billion pounds. The result: a shortage of three billion pounds."

Hendrickson said three things should be done:

"1. We need to keep livestock production at high levels.

"2. We need price ceilings on wholesale and retail meat prices to avoid inflation.

"3. We need some system perhaps rationing, meatless days, a combination of the two, or something else—to assure equitable distribution of what will be a short supply of meat."

"It apears that rationing of meat might be one of the logical steps to solve the meat problems," he stated. "It also appears entirely logical pending the time rationing might be instituted that meatless days each week might be requested of the public by an appropriate Governmental authority."

Army Orders Sharp Curb on Publicity

Miss Kellems Will Run for Congress

VIVIEN KELLEMS

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

Miss Kellems, attractive, thirtyish president of a Westport cable grip manufacturing company, yesterday formally announced her candidacy for the Republican Congressional nomination in the fourth Connecticut District. Miss Kellems, while not mentioning her by name, directed several shafts at Mrs. Luce, whose Republican friends in Greenwich, her home town, have indicated that they would "draft" her, despite her recent statement that she would not actively seek the nomination

Many Officers Face Transfer to Line Duty in Shake-up

The Army made public yesterday an order to military commanders for a sharp curtailment and reorganization of public relations activities by October 1.

In line with Secretary Stimson's announcement last Thursday that the size of ublic relations staffs would be reduced, the order, dated August 14, specified maximum sizes for staffs outside Washington and for some in the Capital, and centralized all such functions in the Bureau of Public Relations, headed by Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles.

Stimson said public relations officers in Washington functioning outside the Public Relations Bureau numbered more than 100, and that in the reorganization about 75 per cent of them would be assigned to duty with troops.

No Place For News "Promotion"

The Secretary said the Army had no place for "promotion of news," and the formal order to commanders said that the rapid expansion of the War Department and the Army "have contributed to an excessive development of public relations activities."

Surles was directed to give the ground forces, the air forces and the services of supply "adequate representation" within his bureau, in place of the large independent staffs now used by these headquarters. However, each of these three divisions of the Army was authorized to establish an office of technical information with not more than four officers and eight enlisted men or civilian employes.

"Army ground forces commands, Army Air Forces commands, defense commands, service commands and Administrative and Supply Services, Services of Supply," the order said, "will restrict their public relations activities so that not more than two officers and four civilian employes or enlisted men will be employed in each office, command or agency.

Each According to Size

"Training centers, replacement training centers, schools and miscellaneous installations whose strength exceeds 5000 men will operate their public relations activities so that the services of not more than two officers and two civilians or enlisted men will be required.

"Organizations and installations having a strength of less than 5000 men will conduct their public relations activities so that the services of not more than one officer and one civilian employe or enlisted man will be required.

In small commands and installations every effort will be made to conduct public relations activities in such a manner that the work may be performed as a part-time additional duty, subordinate to more important military assignments."

House Gets Sanitation, Medical Bills

Two District bills, recently asked of Congress by the Commissioners, were introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee.

One would provide swifter and more stringent procedure for the condemnation of unsanitary buildings in the city, while the second would permit the issuance of temporary medical licenses in the District during the war.

Principal feature of the condemnation bill is the provision of a 10-day jail sentence which would be imposed at the court's discretion on violators of the sanitary regulations. Present law pemits only a maximum $300 fine, which local authorities say is not a sufficient deterrent in many cases.

Other sections of the measure are aimed at speeding up the condemnations—trimming down legal time limits, simplifying appeal methods, and reducing the time in which a condemned building must be emptied of inhabitants.

The medical bill is described as an effort to relieve the threatened shortage of doctors here, as well as to afford relief for refugee physicians and others who cannot meet the regular license requirements because of emergency conditions.

It would allow the Commission on Licensure to issue temporary permits—valid until six months after the war—when applicants satisfy the examiners that they have the requisite education and professional experience.

Bennett's Backers Fail to Vote

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 17.—Tammany Hall's executive committee late today adopted a resolution supporting United States Senator James M. Mead for the gubernatorial nomination.

The committee's action, all but ruling out possibility of a compromise and presaging a last-ditch fight betwen Mead and Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., came as State party leaders awaited a conference tomorrow that may lift the curtain on the delegate strength of the two candidates.

Unless opposing party leaders agree on a single candidate at the conference called for tomorrow night, by James A. Farley, it appeared certain that the Democratic convention, opening in Brooklyn Wednesday, would be split in its first floor fight in 20 years.

According to Tammany Leader Michael J. Kennedy, the Mead resolution was unanimously agreed to with two district leaders, Daniel J. Finn, jr. of the First, and Herbert L. Bruce of the Twenty-first, recorded as not voting.

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska yesterday said that despite the "beautiful remarks" Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois made in the Senate urging him to seek reelection, "I don't expect to be a candidate."

"In view of all the circumstances and my 81 years, I don't think I ought to run again," Senator Norris said. "I do appreciate what Senator Lucas said and I appreciate the many letters I've received urging me to run, but I don't intend to become a candidate."

Senator Norris will round out his fortieth consecutive year in Congress next January, having served in the House ten years before entering the Senate. He always has been a liberal.

$22,000 that he did report for 1939.

3. Whether there was any attempt to evade payment of income tax, such as would require prosecution. The penalty, upon conviction, is $10,000 fine, five years in prison, or both.

Fish might not be liable for taxes if he suffered losses during 1939 which would offset the money he got from Trujillo. When the secret deal came out, he claimed that his $8400 investment in the Nepaug Oil Co., Houston, Tex., was a dead loss.

If Fish was only an agent for Trujillo, the money he got from the Latin ruler would not have been taxable. And it might seem that, if he did suffer losses enough to offset the money he got from Trujillo, he would have reported such losses when he filed his 1939 income tax report. Then they would have offset some of his $10,000 salary as a Congressman and the more than $12,000 he got out of his insurance business.

The saving to Fish on his income tax would have been a tidy piece of change.

The $25,000 was paid Fish in the form of a credit subject to his order in the National City Bank, New York. He transferred $4100 to his own bank in Washington soon after he came back from a gala reception in Berlin, after which he declared Hitler's demands on Poland were "just."

This $4100, too, Fish said he could, and would explain to the income tax agents who, he said, were not investigating his affairs. He claimed that instead of making any money out of what he called his agency for Trujillo, he lost $2000 or $3000 of his "own."

Singing Telegrams And Dog-Walking Out for Duration

New York, Aug. 17 (INS).—Madame's practice of hiring a messenger to walk her pooch will be out for the duration, it appeared tonight.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. announced that effective September 18 singing telegrams special-rate messages and nonessential services heretofore performed by its messengers will be discontinued in the interests of the war effort.

The Postal Telegraph Co. also filed notice with the Federal Communications Commission of intention to halt similar services on the same date.

SAFEWAY Homemakers' Guide

NUMBER 57 ★ Interesting facts about the world's most versatile food ★ 7 lists of real money-saving foods ★ A four-part story about a great discovery

Things you may not know and should . . . about tomatoes

An article prepared by the Safeway Homemakers' Bureau

Tomatoes are without question the most versatile of all foods. They have a place at every meal—tomato juice, soup, salad, sandwiches, sauces, relishes—and they are equally good cooked or uncooked.

Tomato connoisseurs say the best way to enjoy them is to first scald them, then chill, peel, slice, and salt them. But there are many other ways, too.

Tomatoes are wonderful for adding sparkle to other foods—meats, macaroni and spaghetti dishes, and vegetable casseroles. You'll find that round steak, pork or veal chops and steaks, shoulder lamb chops, and similar cuts of meat are more tender and flavorful when braised in tomato juice or tomato soup instead of water.

Another thing—tomatoes not only taste good, they're also rich in Vitamins A and C. Vitamin C, often so elusive, is protected by the natural tomato acid, so that you can scald, cook, and can tomatoes without sacrificing much of the vitamin.

This is the season when tomatoes are ripe and juicy in most parts of the country, and it's a good time to put up tomato juice. The juice is almost as versatile as tomatoes themselves. Serve it hot or cold, as is or highly seasoned, or combined with other liquids. For peppy flavor, add lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce. For different-tasting cocktails, combine tomato juice with equal amounts of chilled pineapple, grapefruit, or sauerkraut juice, or with hot or chilled clam juice, consomme, or bouillon. Or make tomato juice into aspic.

TOMATO JUICE

10 lbs. tomatoes 2 tsps. salt

Wash and core but do not peel tomatoes. Cut in eighths. Place in large 8-qt. kettle; add 2 cups water; cover; boil 10 minutes. Put through sieve to remove seeds. Add salt and heat to boiling. Pour into hot sterilized jars or bottles; seal; and pasteurize (directions follow). Makes about 7 pts.

Bottling and Pasteurization: Do not use lids with zinc tops. Wash jars thoroughly; sterilize by placing in boiling water for 10 minutes. Heat juice to 175° F. to 180° F. Pour into hot jars, filling just to 1½ inches from the top to allow room for expansion. Seal at once, according to type of lid. Place hot jars in water which has been heated to 160° F. to 185° F. Stand jars upright on rack; have completely covered with water. Heat water to 175° F. to 185° F. and hold temperature 30 minutes. Do not heat higher than 185° F. Remove immediately from hot water. Test seals for tightness. Let cool undisturbed in place free from draft. Then wipe off and store.

Ides Of August

Even war and the slaughter of men on many fronts cannot obliterate from the minds of several million Americans the ominous fact that the ides of August are here. For this is the period in which the deadly ragweed begins to open its bottomless bags of pollen for air currents to waft into the nostrils and eyes of hay-fever victims. Compared to this middle week in August the ides of March hold no peril worthy of mention. Indeed, the victims of the foul attack which is now being unloosed often reflect that Caesar, as the victim of the ides of March, was relatively fortunate in that he was soon out of his misery. For the hay fever victim there is little hope of comfort during the next six weeks.

One of our contemporaries falls into the blunder of assuming that hay fever victims regard each year's wretchedness as being worse than the last. That, of course, is just a nonsufferer's delusion. It is associated, no doubt, with the preposterous theory that the disease is only a mental reaction anyway. Actually hay fever cases may be light or severe in different seasons, depending largely upon the amount of pollen with which many different weeds infect the atmosphere. Unfortunately, however, this fluctuation in the severity of the disease holds no hope for victims in Washington this year. Our abundant rainfall appears to have encouraged ragweed—the worst offender—to prolific growth. Billions of invisible particles will be sprayed into the atmosphere to produce fits of sneezing and orgies of nose wiping among the allergic.

Science has come to the aid of the victims with shots in the arm, filters for the nose, drops for the eyes, vapors to inhale, air conditioning and a great variety of local remedies. Varying degrees of relief are afforded in different cases. But the sneezing and sniffling go unhappily on. It may be that the doctors and the inventors are on the wrong track. If the victims themselves were devising the remedy, they would probably work on an anesthetic that would put them out of their misery for the duration.

Three Out Of Five

The renomination of three of the five former isolationist candidates in last week's primaries admits of various interpretations, depending somewhat on the political bias of the interpreter. Thus in that section of the press which has always been, and is now, implacably opposed to the Administration and all its works, the results are seen as a complete popular repudiation of any movement to eliminate from Congress those members who fought the Roosevelt foreign policy before December 7, 1941. In the other camp, however, they are explaining that the real test will not come until November, since it is the machine vote rather than public sentiment which decides the issue at the primary elections.

Machine support—that is to say, a substantial nucleus of votes from persons bound to a candidate by gratitude for past favors or the hope of future favors or just by plain factional bigotry—is certainly a valuable advantage for the candidate. But there is no reason to believe that in a congressional primary, the machine can frustrate the will of a genuinely aroused electorate. One must admit, therefore, that neither Mr. Fish's record on foreign policy nor the scandals involving his familiars, neither the compromising circumstances in the Trujillo matter nor even the personal exhortations of Messrs. Willkie and Dewey, could arouse the Republican voters of Dutchess County against Mr. Fish. That is an indictment of their intelligence. It is also a revelation of the persistence in wartime of their anti-Rooseveltism. However, it would be very rash to conclude—as some would certainly wish us to conclude—that the inhabitants of Dutchess County represent anything like a barometer of American political and social opinion. No one who has ever been in Dutchess County would make such a mistake, nor is Mr. Roosevelt (who was born there) likely to make it.

The fact is that the result in each of these five districts must be judged separately, since in no two were circumstances identical. Take the case of Mr. Marcantonio. Representative Marcantonio's district in Harlem differs in several respects from Mr. Fish's in Dutchess County. But it comes no nearer than Mr. Fish's district to being a representative cross-section of the Nation. Moreover, it is not at all clear whether Mr. Marcantonio owes his renomination on a labor ticket to his isolation record or to an exactly opposite reason. Until about June 20, 1941, Mr. Marcantonio was certainly a pacifist and isolationist; since then, however, he has been among our most distinguished fire-eaters. That Mr. Marcantonio's change of heart was roughly coincident with a certain reorientation of the Communist Party line may or may not be significant. But whatever the logic which led him to realize that this was not an imperialistic war, after all, we are pretty sure it would have little influence upon the Republicans of Dutchess County.

Marshall For The Job

It may be taken for granted that Mr. Churchill did not fly to Moscow to carry words of consolation or even pledges of aid to Mr. Stalin. Sympathy is of no help to a man imprisoned under a steam roller. It is a mockery of his predicament. Of pledges of aid the hard-pressed Slavs have had enough and to spare. The fact is that of the two routes into Russia the northern route to Murmansk is now a graveyard of convoys and the southern route through Iran affords only a trickle of aid and at any time, moreover, may be shut off by the Nazi advance. Aid to Russia can now be given only by a diversion from the West. It would be foolish to suppose that any other subject came up for discussion in the Kremlin except the how and where of establishing a second front, and the means of coordinating it with Russia's defensive campaign.

The race to prevent Hitler from Nazifying all Europe and the entrances to all the other continents except Australia is now on in grim earnest. Eight weeks are left to Hitler to sweep away the organized resistance of the Red armies which stand guard over these prizes. If the schedule eludes him, General Mud would bog him down. But on that prospect we dare not pin our hopes, for, if Hitler smashes the Red armies and brings Russia's oil into his war economy, no man will be able to envisage the end of this catastrophic war. Of course, these elementary facts are appreciated in the inner counsels of the United Nations. And it may be that an over-all strategical plan already has been devised to make Hitler divide his irresistible legions. The trouble is that we do not seem to have put our organization in shape to execute it. To all intents and purposes a vacuum exists where authority should reign. It is said that our Commander in Chief, realizing the fateful consequences of any offensive in Europe by the United Nations, has undertaken to abide by the decisions of the Combined Staffs Committee in Washington. But, as we have said before, this committee is not authoritative. It doesn't even have a permanent chairman, and all its conclusions have to be checked in London by Mr. Churchill himself.

In these circumstances the time is overdue to name a generalissimo for the Western Front. Time was when this step should have been preceded by the establishment of a supreme war council. But so many steps have been missed and so much sand has trickled out of the hourglass that a step-by-step program is now out of the question. If a generalissimo were appointed now, the Combined Staffs Committee might at the same time be given the status of a supreme war council. Be that as it may, a generalissimo is the need of this eleventh hour, a man who could personify our war organization and direct it at Hitler. Our present organizational set-up is so diffuse that our production and distribution of material have lost touch with our strategy. With our strategy directed at the prevention of a Hitler-dominated Europe, our production seems to have been dammed up internally. To be sure, there is a shipping bottleneck. But an equally significant bottleneck is the Services of Supply, which, anxious to equip our growing Army in the least possible time, seems to have assumed power to divert shipments from the fighting fronts. A generalissimo would end this pulling and hauling by making supply the servant of strategy. He would end the division of authority which is the characteristic of the capital of the United Nations. We know we are on a horse, but we seem to be galloping off in all directions—and all because there is nobody who has authoritative hold on the reins.

Who should be the generalissimo? In all the discussions on the subject in the last two months, one name stands out as the only possible choice. That is our Chief of Staff, Gen. George C. Marshall. The British have already indicated that he would be acceptable to them, and there is no question that he is the greatest soldier in our Army today. General Marshall has had the combat experience. In the first war he was aide de camp to General Pershing, and he demonstrated his strategical genius by plotting the St. Mihiel offensive, the first offensive in which our Army acted as a unit. Our new Army, moreover, is General Marshall's army. And respect for his gifts of organization and his leadership is evident all the way down the line from the highest general to the lowliest private. Let us give him the opportunity and the tools, and he will finish the job. The naming of General Marshall at this critical juncture in the affairs of humanity would be of immense service to the Allied cause. It would close the Russian ranks, electrify our British Allies, spread a wave of enthusiasm throughout our Nation and give Hitler a foretaste of the knockout blow which must come when the United Nations strike their tents and march to battle.

REA Gets Into Line

A few months ago we commended the War Production Board for halting the construction of unnecessary power lines sponsored and financed by the Rural Electrification Administration. For that public service we were roundly denounced by Mr. Harry Slattery, administrator of the REA, and later by Representative John E. Rankin of Mississippi. Mr. Rankin went so far as to accuse us of trying to build up public sentiment against any movement whatever toward providing an adequate power supply to serve war industries in the Southwestern States. It is an interesting commentary on this absurdity that the WPB has now found it necessary to stop construction of all electric power distribution systems, including REA projects.

Some of the projects which REA cooperatives were authorized to complete after the first WPB restrictions were applied have now been finished. Others will probably remain uncompleted until after the end of the war. Military needs have taken precedence over the keen desire of REA officials to continue peacetime work. Mr. Slattery and his colleagues made a desperate effort to show that completion of the REA's construction program was essential to the war effort, and they lost patience with anyone who dared to challenge that thesis. But they could not cling to that untenable position for long under the pressure of the globe-circling war, and we are glad to note indications that, even before the WPB order, the REA had abandoned it.

The indications are that Mr. Slattery had already stopped construction of uncompleted REA projects. That attitude calls for wholehearted approval, and we do not hesitate to express our commendation. It means that the REA has put itself into line with the realities of our present grim outlook. It has recognized, at least in some measure, the necessity of widespread conversion of peacetime agencies to a war footing. It now seems to realize that it is more important to provide the Army and Navy with copper in its possession than to continue building power lines that for the present we can get along without. The changed attitude which the REA's action implies should not be lost upon other Governmental agencies that are still trying to carry out their peacetime assignments as usual.

Dutch Agony

It is painfully obvious that no "last warning" from President Roosevelt would halt the wave of barbarism in the Netherlands. Why, then, has the Dutch government in exile requested it? Clearly the Dutch exiles are so troubled at heart, so conscious of their impotence to come to the rescue of their countrymen, that they felt they must demonstrate their horror. Five hostages already have been shot for the wrecking of a troop train in Holland allegedly by Dutch saboteurs. Two hundred more hostages have been rounded up to add to the 1815 who are now in custody. The Nazis threaten to keep on killing till the saboteurs are handed over. That the killing of hostages is contrary to the rules of war is beside the Nazi point. There is no law in the Nazi lexicon, for the herrenvolk believe that respect for law as such is just another of the superstitions of old-fashioned liberalism.

The more the Nazis defy the law, the more we must uphold it. And nothing will try men's souls in days to come more than this effort. All over Europe the oppressed peoples, with vengeance in their hearts, are thinking in terms of a tooth for a tooth. In their place we might have the same corroding hatred. But the cause for which we are fighting will not permit the would-be liberators of enslaved Europe to become Hitlerian. Evil cannot be fought with evil, it will not be exorcised by evil, and the new world cannot be built on evil. In point of fact, the shocking news from Holland is a sign that the mad career of Naziism is doomed. It is perfectly evident that all hope of erecting a new order in Europe has vanished. If ever the Nazis expected collaboration, they have now lost hope in it. The veil is asunder, and Naziism stands naked before the world as the living incarnation of Attila's beasts. But there is fear back of these reprisals, and the revelation should encourage action in place of any more words, either as a "last warning" to the Nazis or as comfort and consolation to the Dutch people. Holland's agony should be our goad.

IN A DRUG STORE

The candy case was gay behind your head.
"Blood Analyzed," a startling placard said.
But colored soaps were clean as roses are,
And forest light was dripping through a jar.

We spoke of thoughts beyond the gust of time:
How everything together makes a chime.
Wonder refreshed us, art became the green
Leaf-hidden lingering of a lute unseen.

The globes of ice, each tinted like a flower,
Were cooling nectar in a timeless hour
Beside a black glass table bright and calm
As water found at last beneath a palm.

Awards

Awards of the Distinguished Service Cross during the World War were relatively few, and as there has been no official history of the United States forces for that conflict yet issued, there is scant means of ascertaining just how many awards were made. We do know that Major Whittelsey, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker and Sergt. Alvin York got this award and became national heroes, and we also know that the cross was not awarded anywhere near as often as the Croix de Guerre and the German Iron Cross. If memory serves, the usual place of award was in the presence of troops in the theater of operations, as is customary among fighting nations.

Although the fighting has as yet not been nearly so severe as in 1918 and confined largely to aerial combat, the cross and other metals have been rather widely awarded, and rarely, if ever, conferred on the field of action. This surely does not enhance the award in the eyes of fighting men; there is a saying going around that if a pilot knocks down four or five enemy planes he becomes a hero and is entitled to the D. S. C. or other award. American decorations should not be classed with the Croix de Guerre.

It is noticeable that the D. S. C. and kindred awards have been made to personnel of the Regular Army so far. This is in contrast to the awards made to York (National Army), and Whittelsey and Rickenbacker, neither of whom were regulars. It would create a poor impression if awards were confined to the professional component of the Army of the United States exclusively. VETERAN.

Sales Tax

The people of the Pacific Coast are quite war conscious but they have a very decided feeling that politics is playing too important a role in the entire war effort, and that there is too much desire to hang onto ideologies and theories of domestic government when civilization is hanging in the balance and the very existence of our country is at stake.

Here in California we have tried the sales tax. We have the kind of sales tax that is supposed to be the most unpopular. The purchaser has to take the money out of his pocket and pay it over the counter and yet the tax is exceedingly popular. It has put us out of debt and is not considered a burden by the majority of any class. Attempts to knock it out have regularly met with failure.

India: Our Danger And Our Duty

A year ago Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston S. Churchill signed the Atlantic Charter, pledging their countries to "respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live." Today all the peoples of all the United Nations are menaced with irreparable calamity by the tragic conflict between alien government and an unfree people which has been allowed to break out in India.

The British decision to outlaw the Indian National Congress at a time when no overt act of disobedience had taken place and Gandhi was preparing an appeal to the viceroy and to the United Nations for further negotiations is regarded by many as justified. Leopold Amery defends the decision as necessary to "save India and the Allied cause from a grave disaster," threatened by the "wicked folly" of the Mahatma and his colleagues. Yet even those who accept this view know in their hearts that there could be no graver disaster to the cause of freedom than what has happened in India and no folly more wicked than the folly which seeks to save India from her enemies through a policy of terrorization indorsed by her friends.

All Americans have a solemn duty to themselves, to their sons and to their comrades-in-arms against tyranny all over the globe to demand that this road to ruin be abandoned at once, regardless of responsibility for past mistakes. To "wait and see" will be to commit once more the crime of "too little and too late" in an arena of battle which is the home of one-sixth of the human race. An India ruled by force and torn by rebellion is an India mortgaged to the common enemy. Shame-faced silence on the part of Americans and Britons of good will may indeed enable Mr. Amery and those of like mind to "restore order" by crushing the Congress movement. Such a victory will be bought at the cost of the ultimate defeat of the British Empire and of the United Nations. A sullen and beaten India will go the way of Malaya, Java and Burma where many of the natives, in sharp contrast to the Filipinos, saw nothing to choose between our cause and that of the foe.

Such an India will never be saved by British or American troops. To lose India tomorrow by American default today will be to doom China to subjugation, to deliver all the Middle East to the Axis and to force the armies of Russia behind the Urals, regardless of any second front. The sequel for Britain can only be invasion. The sequel for America can only be an endless and all but hopeless war against opponents who will rule the world.

These strategic consequences will flow inexorably from the moral blindness of those who believe that the armed coercion of subject peoples, however misled they may be, is compatible with a world-wide fight for freedom. The Tory mind which once courted catastrophe by meeting Nazi violence with nonviolence is now courting an incalculably greater catastrophe by meeting Indian nonviolence with violence. "The age of imperialism," declared Sumner Welles only two months ago, "is ended." "The four freedoms of common humanity," asserts President Roosevelt, "are the rights of men of every creed and every race, wherever they live. The belief in man, created free, in the image of God, is the crucial difference between ourselves and the enemies we face today. Here is our strength, the source and promise of victory."

That strength and that promise cannot be cast away for any reason, good or bad, without giving victory to the foe. Every Indian who languishes in a British jail, who screams under a British lash, who dies before a British gun, will become a symbol of despair for millions of the colored peoples of the earth. These silent and waiting multitudes will conclude, wrongly no doubt but nonetheless irrevocably, that Western white men offer them only fair words and foul deeds, that the darker peoples have no stake in a war between rival oppressors, and that Axis arrogance may be more tolerable than democratic hypocrisy. Men of all races cannot work or fight effectively for freedom if their leaders care so little for the cause as to permit the torment which is being suffered by India today.

The time to act is now. A year ago a group of Americans privately urged upon Lord Halifax and the Department of State American mediation between Britain and the principal Indian political groups. Events have confirmed the impossibility of successful negotiations limited to Britishers and Indians. "We have tried our best to agree," said Sir Stafford Cripps last April. "We have failed. Never mind whose fault it is." Agreement through outside action has now been rendered much more difficult and infinitely more imperative by the obstructive policies of the Congress leaders and, in even greater measure, by the rash action of London in imprisoning those leaders and shedding Indian blood in the name of India's defense. These difficulties cannot conceivably be resolved either by the forcible suppression of the Congress nor by the forcible overthrow of British rule. They can only be resolved by all the United Nations insisting upon an immediate settlement under United Nations auspices. "Our allies," writes The Manchester Guardian"—the United States, China and Russia—should help us to compose a quarrel which injured every one of them."

This is America's opportunity, for only America enjoys the confidence of all. Let Americans everywhere ask their President to join with the leaders of China and Russia in proposing arbitration of the Indian conflict. Let the proposal expressly contemplate the preparation by a United Nations tribunal of a plan for the establishment within the next three months, of a provisional government of an independent India, linked in war and peace alike to the British Commonwealth and the United Nations as a free and equal partner. This will be no more than the British government has promised for the future and no less than the Indian leaders have asked for the present. Let the tribunal include an American, a Britisher, a Russian and a Chinese, plus representatives of the Moslem League and the Congress. Let all pledge themselves in advance to accept whatever plan may be proposed by the tribunal. A settlement acceptable to all can be realized only by pooling the wisdom and good will of all. As a pledge of good faith, let the present government of India cease all repression and release all political prisoners, and let the Congress leaders suspend their campaign of noncooperation. No leader anywhere will dare to reject a proposal for such a tribunal. No leader anywhere will dare to reject its conclusions. In no other way can India be saved.

To shirk this opportunity is to invite defeat. To seize upon it will be to pave the way to victory by showing all mankind that the United Nations can translate freedom into creative action and can plan now, by democratic means, for the free world of the future. India has become the acid test of our fitness to survive. To fail here will be to fail everywhere. To succeed here will be to prove the truth of the President's words: "We of the United Nations have the power and the men and the will at last to assure man's heritage."

The Post Impressionist

If I Ran A Restaurant

Although it will be several years before I can retire from the Government service, I have already been turning over in my mind what I am going to do with myself when that happy day arrives. My latest decision is that I'd like to try my hand at running a restaurant, for I see in that field a great need, both for reform and for new blood. I figure that in the 17 years that I've been in Washington I have eaten well over 5000 restaurant meals, and certainly these have given me opportunity to make some well-founded observations and have furnished the basis for a set of 20 principles on which my restaurant is to be run. I see no harm in giving these out now. Some of them, I have suspected, are original with me:

1. The prime assumption will be that people patronize a restaurant for one main reason—to satisfy their hunger. Granted, there may be exceptions. In cold climates, for example, a person may go into an eating place to get warm. In hot countries one may go in to enjoy the air-conditioning. But when I see a man walking into my restaurant I shall say to myself, "Hmmm, that fellow is hungry. He wants to eat. He wants, as Rose Macaulay put it, to feel food rotating about his palate, and the liquid gurgling and gushing, like the flood of life, down the throat with silver sound. I'm going to fix him up, and when he walks out of here he'll think, 'Judas Priest, but that was a swell meal!'"

2. Under no circumstances will chicken croquettes be served.

3. It will be assumed that one of the main reasons why a person eats out rather than at home is to escape from certain of the ubiquitous distractions of home-life. Therefore, in my place there'll be no mechanical music in any guise. There'll be no little boxes scattered around in which to drop a nickel and out pops one of those god-awful swing recordings, drowning out the conversation and making your food taste a sort of a yellow-green and you wish you'd died when you were a baby. In my restaurant there will be no music except the golden music of the steak knives, the music of the laughter of happy epicureans, and the song of the faithful but not too avid cash register.

4. Coleslaw will be served only on special demand.

5. Waitresses will not be allowed to annoy patrons by saying, "Is everything all right?" or "How did you find your dinner?" or "Have you finished?" A cafe is no place for rhetorical palaver.

6. Waitresses will be required to place the check face up on the table. This is probably just perversity, but it seems logical.

7. Chicken croquettes will be outlawed. If it is desired to serve bread crumbs and kitchen sweepings fried in deep fat, this delicacy will be properly labeled and unaccompanied by any cream-sauce camouflage.

8. It will be the great objective to satisfy the customer at the price he can afford to pay. If he prefers to fill up on a 50-cent meal rather than one at $1.25, he ought to have a chance. Whether he chooses to eat baked beans and apple pie or caviar and breast of squab, he has a right to expect to get enough of them to fill him up.

9. Waitresses will be asked to keep a surreptitious watch of patrons as they eat. If one appears to look as if he thought he were getting gypped, there shall be placed on his table, willy-nilly, a dish of assorted nuts (including nigger-toes), another order of hot rolls, a lime sherbet and a side dish of escalloped oysters. That'll fix him.

10. But there shall be no chicken croquettes.

11. Subterfuge will be frowned upon. If the meal calls for creamed chicken on toast, it will mean that both of these items will be served, not just the toast thinly covered with the nebulous essence of boiled-over chicken wings. There will also be an immutable rule that the size of steak portions shall exceed 2 square inches.

12. Summer squash will be taboo, and stuffed tomatoes will not be served to minors unaccompanied by their parents.

13. There will be no parsley used as embellishment. Parsley is a relic of paganism that has lost its original significance for the modern world. Beauty is all right until it gets into the gravy. As an anonymous gourmet exclaimed when he saw parsley generously bestrewn around the platter containing his favorite piece de resistance:

O gentle sprig of green, vamoose!
Begone, and be not superseded.
I want my meat well done, au juice;
I want my eating unimpeded!

14. Cooks found preparing any dish even remotely resembling a chicken croquette will be discharged with prejudice.

15. Cooperation with the National Bureau of Standards will be vigorously encouraged, so that modern methods of removing breakfast egg-yolk from between the tines of a silver fork may always be available.

16. The management will be responsible for hats, coats and umbrellas. This is just to be different.

18. There will be no signs posted saying "No Tipping Permittted," but no tipping will be permitted. If I can't pay my help without handouts from the customers, I'll close up shop.

19. I'll probably close up anyhow, for at this rate the place'll go busted in less than a week. But it will be a lot of fun while it lasts, and I think it's a fine idea.

20. No chicken croquettes!

Pertinent Revivals

The movies have done a good job in helping with the war effort but I wonder what purpose revivals are serving, for example, "Farewell to Arms" which has been shown in several Washington theaters within the past few weeks. Both the hero and the heroine who are presented so as to win our sympathy are deserters from the armed forces

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Nelson, Marshall, And King

LIPPMANN

WE CAN MEASURE how important are the next few weeks in Washington only when we realize that the campaigns of 1943 will have to be opened with the weapons that are ordered now and are delivered by the end of this year. It takes time to manufacture weapons: that is why we are doing almost all our fighting today with the weapons that were decided upon, and for the most part manufactured, before Pearl Harbor.

That, too, is why so much depends on what is done this August and this September to make the right use of the badly defined and largely unused, but nevertheless vast, powers which the President has delegated to Mr. Donald Nelson.

THE CRUCIAL ROLE which Mr. Nelson must fill is just beginning to be understood—even among some very high officials in Washington. Otherwise, for example, no one would have played with the notion that Mr. Nelson's work could be taken over by the supply branches of the Army and Navy. The mere idea that Mr. Nelson and General Somerville are rivals is evidence of a deep confusion of mind. For if Mr. Nelson is not undisputably higher up than any and all the procurement officers, if he does not participate in the planning of the war at the level of General Marshall and Admiral King, and of the combined chiefs of staff, and of the British Minister of Production, then Mr. Nelson is all dressed up with no place to go.

This will all be much clearer if and when Mr. Nelson decides to reorganize himself. For he will be able to do what he alone can do, only if he delegates to others the things he should have done months ago, has not done yet, and does not know how to do. Mr. Nelson needs to appoint with full powers a manager of war production who knows how to organize the flow of materials and of parts. When he has divested himself of this administrative and managerial function for which he has neither the training nor the temperament, there will remain to him the least appreciated and the most indispensable part of his job.

THAT JOB can best be defined, I think, by saying that Mr. Nelson's office is to be the supreme director for the United States of the war budget. By the war budget I mean the consolidated balance sheet of all the military and civilian requirements of the United Nations and of the neutrals on the one hand, and all their available resources on the other. This budget must be balanced if our war plans are to be solvent. It is Mr. Nelson's job to see that the budget is balanced at the highest level of military efficiency, that is to say by imposing the maximum sacrifices on the civilians and by forcing the military to plan for the most efficient fighting value out of the available materials.

Now Mr. Nelson has made a very fair beginning, but only a beginning, at increasing his assets by cutting down civilian consumption. But he is still at the stage of arguing and pleading, in his excessively patient way, for a valid commitment from the military chieftains of what among the things that can be produced they most urgently want for the fighting they intend to do next year.

This is the nub of the problem at the present time. The question is whether Mr. Nelson and his British counterpart, Captain Lyttleton, can commit General Marshall and Admiral King, the British military leaders, and Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt to a definite program of armaments for next year.

JUST WHAT is meant by a commitment? Does it mean that they must adopt now hard and fast plans of next year's campaigns in all existing and all potential theaters of war? It does not. There are too many unexpected developments in all wars, and particularly in this war, to permit final decisions now about all the operations of next year.

What it does mean is that the military leaders must commit themselves now to the technique of the war they mean to fight—to the kinds of weapons and the proportion among them. There is no other way to get those weapons next year and to have men trained to use them.

OUR ENEMIES have had to make military commitments of this sort, and no general staff in the world can afford not to make them. The Germans, for example, committed themselves for land warfare to the tank and dive bomber combination, and in the air to craft which had a relatively short range for pursuit, bombing, and cargo carrying. They chose these weapons as the best suited to overrun the European continent. For their navy they committed themselves to the submarine, realizing that with the resources at their command they could not also build a dominant surface fleet. When their decisions were taken, Germany was not committed to every campaign that has actually been conducted. But Germany was committed to the kind of campaigning in which her specialized equipment is effective. And because she was committed in advance, she had plenty of tanks, dive bombers and submarines, and the commanders and men trained to use them.

That is real preparation for real war, and it must be said of our own military leaders that they have been slow and reluctant to make the fateful decisions. Partly because we were unprepared and everywhere on the defensive, partly because they were somewhat the victims of the illusion that our huge resources are as unlimited as the money that Congress can appropriate, partly because they felt rightly that we were not beginning to ask enough of our civilians, the military chieftains have shrunk from committing themselves.

Thus they have tended to aim at universal, all-purpose military preparation—a Navy supreme in all classes of vessels, an air force supreme in all categories, and a ground Army equal in size to the German and surpassing it in equipment. The result of this universal planning is, together with Mr. Nelson's failure to control inventories and the flow of materials, reflected in the priorities. The demand exceeds the supply, and so the procurement officers and their contractors have to stand in line and jostle each other to get what they can.

THE LACK of a balanced military budget, which is possible only if the military leaders commit themselves, brings about a curious and very undersirable result. Instead of the chieftains determining the weapons our forces will actually have in their hands next year, it is the steel companies and the purchasing agents of the war industries who in very considerable degree are determining it.

They do not wish to do so. Yet, because Mr. Nelson has not yet played his part in balancing the military budgets of General Marshall and Admiral King, our tactical equipment and, therefore, ultimately our strategic planning, is being fixed not wholly by the high command but in large part at least by accident.

D. C. Firm Is Low Bidder for Army Hospital Project

By the Associated Press

The Jeffress Dyer Co., Washington, submitted a low bid to the Army engineers district office here yesterday for construction of the Woodrow Wilson Army General Hospital near Staunton, Va.

The Roth Engineering Co., Washington, submitted the second low bid, and the Caldwell Wingate Co., New York, third.

The engineers office declined to make public the offers, explaining that variations in the bids made further checking desirable. Bids were submitted on an alternative basis for brick and frame construction, and the engineers said the three bidders ranked the same on both proposals.

Original plans called for frame construction, but engineers said results of the bidding would determine the final choice.

Socialism In Canada

By Janet R. Keith

Gathers Strength

SOCIALISM is likely to emerge as the official part of opposition in the Canadian parliament after the war. The Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, which is working for a mild form of socialism, startled Canada recently by taking organized labor into its fold. Ontario locals of the important Canadian unions voted in favor of political affiliation with the C. C. F. party. The move was the more surprising because Canadian labor has never entered politics before.

The C. C. F. party was formed exactly 10 years ago. It describes itself as "a federation of organizations whose purpose is the establishment in Canada of a cooperative commonwealth in which the principle regulating production, distribution and exchange will be the supplying of human needs and not the making of profits."

In 10 years the C. C. F. party has acquired nine seats in the House of Commons. The seats are thinly spread across Canada; one from British Columbia beside the Pacific and one from Nova Scotia beside the Atlantic, one from Ontario, one from Manitoba, and five from drought-ridden Saskatchewan on the western prairies.

Strong in Two Provinces

The C. C. F. is the official opposition in the legislatures of two provinces. In British Columbia it has 14 seats and got the largest party vote in the last election. In Saskatchewan it has 11 seats, and the provincial leader is regarded as a likely candidate for first C. C. F. premier in Canada.

Manitoba has three C. C. F. members in its legislature. The party is part of a coalition government, and its leader is the minister of labor. Down in Nova Scotia are another three provincial C. C. F. members.

War and its attendant unrest has given an impetus to the gradual development of the C. C. F. It's most spectacular success was the winning of a by-election in February of this year. The Conservative party wanted a new leader, and persuaded Senator Arthur Meighen, onetime Prime Minister and veteran of Canadian politics, to come back to the House of Commons. But first he had to go through the mere technicality of getting a seat. The Libersals decided not to contest the by-election, which was to be held in a constituency with an unbroken record of conservatism since its creation in 1904. The C. C. F. put up a school teacher named Joseph Noseworthy. And Noseworthy defeated Meighen.

Small Gifts Finance C. C. F.

The campaign was financed, as C. C. F. campaigns always are, by small contributions from individuals. Many were donations of a dollar or less. While the C. C. F. was undoubtedly helped by the absence of a liberal candidate, Noseworthy's victory made political history. It has raised the prestige of the party in Canadian eyes.

Recently elected national president, M. J. Coldwell is the party's leader in the House of Commons. Dynamic, sharp-witted and always a gentleman, Mr. Coldwell is a fair match in debate with any member in the House. During the last session parliamentary commentators rated him as one of top half-dozen "men with a future" in the Commons. Relentlessly he hammered away at the C. C. F. war program: limitation of profits to a percentage of capital investment, mobilization of wealth as well as men, replacement of dollar-a-year men with paid administrators, ceiling on incomes, government control of all war industries, extension of social insurance.

The future of the C. C. F. party is the most interesting question mark in Canadian politics. The prospects in the west are good. British Columbia, which was pro-C. C. F. in the provincial elections, will probably send more C. C. F. members to the House of Commons. Alberta, which was side-tracked into Social Credit, may or may not be a likely field. Saskatchewan, discontented with present government agricultural policies, will probably be the party stronghold.

What about the big wealthy provinces of Ontario and Quebec? The Ontario section has recently galvanized into action, and elected a provincial leader who will serve as party political head. According to present plans, the C. C. F. will put up candidates in 75 of Ontario's 90 ridings at the next election. Most of these will be farmer-labor candidates.

Quebec, stronghold of Roman Catholicism and a conservative way of life, is traditionally opposed to any form of radicalism. But war has unsettled many Quebec traditions. Disillusioned and disappointed in the present government, Quebecers are looking for a party which will give them the social and economic justice they claim to have been denied. Prime Minister King is working desperately to hold French Canadian allegiance to the Liberal party. But the C. C. F. and the Social Credit party are determined to put up a fight.

Frank Scott, professor of constitutional law at McGill University, is the chief figure in the C. C. F. drive to win Quebec. To many French workers who belong to international unions, the economic reforms of the C. C. F. have a strong appeal. The main obstacle, of course, is the opposition of the Catholic Church to anything that smacks of "bolshevism." The C. C. F. may water down its program to suit the demands of the church, but there is a danger that the watering-down would destroy the fundamental principles upon which the party is based.

Another difficulty is that Quebec opposes centralization of government, usually considered essential to any form of planned economy. However, the C. C. F. has appointed a full-time French-speaking organizer to work in Quebec. Whatever its strength in other parts of Canada, the C. C. F. realizes that no political party can have a promising future without the support of French Quebec.

Oil In The Caucasus

By Isaac Stone

Abundant And Accessible

THE relentless Nazi drive upon the Caucasus has at long last disclosed to the world that Hitler's foremost quest is for petroleum, the very lifeblood of every modern war machine. Although the precise state of Germany's oil supplies is a matter of dispute, experts are generally agreed that the Russian campaign has forced her to draw upon her reserve stocks. With the Nazi dream of a short war shattered, Hitler must either acquire new stores of the black liquid or face the certain prospect of seeing his superb war machine gradually coming to a standstill. The Caucasus alone contains the solution to the most desperate problem Hitler has yet had to face. With the wells of the Caucasus in his hold, he could face his foes indefinitely, besides forging ahead into the Middle East, where more oil wealth lies in wait.

Few spots on God's earth are as plentifully endowed with this precious liquid as is the Caucasus. The Soviets estimate that nearly 80 per cent of the world's oil supply is to be found in the Soviet Union, and nearly 85 per cent of this volume is located in the Caucasus. Not only is it found in abundance, and accessible with ease, but its quality is of the highest.

Germany's synthetic fuels notably yield an inferior quality of lubricants. Yet lubricants of the highest quality are essential to the maximum effectiveness of aerial operation, and in subzero temperature they are indispensable for keeping in motion all mechanized vehicles. This lack was in great measure responsible for the setbacks suffered by Germany's mechanized forces in the air and on the ground during last winter. The oil of the Caucasus is in this respect a superproduct.

Maikop and Grozny

In North Caucasia the two main oil-producing centers are Maikop-Kuban and Grozny. A distance of some 300 miles separates the Maikop wells from those of Grozny. During 1940 Maikop and Grozny provided 16 per cent of Russia's total production. Grozny's cracking and processing facilities are regarded among the most technically advanced in the world. The machinery has largely been imported, and American and British engineers were at one time paid fabulous salaries to aid in their installation and operation. A 12-inch pipeline connects the Grozny deposits with Rostov, but it has undoubtedly been demolished.

Both Maikop and Grozny lie directly in the path of Hitler's legions, and in the terrain approaches to them they will find a friend rather than an enemy, except for the havoc that the retreating Soviet forces will undoubtedly work with the roads. The ground is level, and the weather at this time of the year ideal. But there can scarcely be a doubt that the Soviets will do a thorough job of demolition in both Maikop and Grozny.

Some 300 miles from Grozny is the Baku oil center, situated in Transcaucasia, on the Caspian Sea. It is the Soviet Union's most important oil reservoir and one of the greatest deposits on this planet. It has been Russia's main source of oil, producing 75 per cent of the total output. Its quality, as well as that of all concomitant products, ranks among the finest. According to the Soviet expert, Professor Gubkin, the Baku deposit contains 1325 million tons of petroleum. American experts estimate that at the rate of Russia's production in 1940, the Baku deposit should last for over 60 years.

Pipelines carry the Baku oil to Black Sea ports, notably Batum. Pipelines have not, however, been extensively laid in the Soviet Union, their total length amounting only to some 5000 miles, the bulk of the oil being transported by tank cars and barges.

1939 Oil Shortage

So great was the demand for oil on the part of Russia's industrial establishment and mechanized farms even before the war began that there was actually a shortage of oil at the end of 1939. The Third Five-Year Plan called indeed for a 77 per cent increase in total oil production. The war has undoubtedly imposed even greater demands upon the oil sources of the Caucasus.

It is obvious that while the loss of Maikop and Grozny would not be without effect, the fall of Baku into the hands of the Nazis would constitute a body blow to Russia's industrial plants and war machine. Fortunately, the approaches to Baku are blocked by one of the world's most staggering mountain ranges. Over a distance of several hundred miles the elevation varies from 5000 feet to nearly 19,000, which is the height of Mount Elberuz. Only two so-called roads are suitable for the passage of armored vehicles. The main one, known as the Gruzenian (or Georgian) Military Road, which leads into Tiflis, traverses dazzling altitudes, and for a distance of 10 miles is over a height of 8000 feet, flanked on both sides by awsome cliffs. This certainly would be a suicide march for the Nazi legions. Should the Nazis nevertheless succeed in reaching Baku, nothing but ruins will greet their gaze.

It has been said that so overflowing is the oil wealth of the Caucasus that the Nazis would succeed in putting wells in operation within a short time. It is true that Maikop's crude oil may be tapped on an average at 2000 feet; but Maikop's supply is inconsequential. For Grozny's yield, 5000 feet would have to be drilled. In Baku the wells average from 2500 to 10,000 feet. In view of the thorough demolition that the Russians are likely to effect it is doubtful if the deposits of Grozny and Baku will yield oil to the conquerors in substantial measure even after many months of effort.

Starkly realistic as they are, the Soviet leaders have undoubtedly not overlooked the dangers that the loss of the Caucasus might entail, and they have unquestionably accumulated vast stores of oil and distributed them at strategic points. However, even as they have established in the Urals a new industrial region to be relied upon in the event of the loss of the Ukraine, they have also sought to find new oil centers to replace the possible loss of the Caucasus. Stalin's exhortation to establish a "second Baku" has not been without effect. Since 1937 the Commissariat of Defense in conjunction with the Ural Petroleum Trust has been engaged in establishing this "second Baku" in the Urals. During the past several years Soviet experts have been prospecting for oil beyond the Caspian, on the slopes of the Urals, in Central Asia, in Siberia, and even on the top of the world. An oil-drilling station has in fact been established in the Arctic Circle. The very fact, however, that the leadership has engaged in exploring new sources of petroleum indicates a grave concern for the fate of the Caucasus. The most significant of the new oil deposits in the Ural-Emba Basin situated in the Urals and Kazakstan, which covers an area of over 150,000 square miles and is estimated to contain nearly 1,300,000,000 tons of oil. It is this region that the Soviets now hope to convert into a "second Baku." The quality of the oil is said to compare favorably with that of southern Texas. American machinery has been imported for better exploitation of the new deposit. Several minor deposits have been found in other Asiatic areas. Their pontentialities are undoubtedly considerable, but the actuality is far less glittering. The Third Five-Year Plan indeed envisaged a 500 per cent increase in the output of the various new oil centers. In the early part of 1941, however, all the new centers produced only 15 per cent of total Russian output. And Russia's total output in 1941 was at the 1937 level.

Other Caucasus Products

The vital significance of the oil of the Caucasus for Russia is thus crystal clear. But quite apart from oil, the Caucasus possesses an abundance of other essential mineral wealth, more especially manganese, of which the Nazis are exceedingly short, and of which Transcaucasia produces 25 per cent of the world's output.

Indeed, the Caucasus, comprising northern Caucasia and Transcaucasia, and covering an area of 440,000 square miles, constitutes one of the most variegated and richest stretches of terrain on the surface of the earth. Certainly no part of Russia can compare with it for beauty, natural wealth, and human diversity. It is literally Russia's dreamland. Its vegetation is more diverse than that of any other part of Russia, except the Crimea; it abounds in animal life; its inhabitants are more fierce and independent than those of any other portion of the vast Soviet domain. They speak some 70 main dialects, largely non-Slavic, owing to their Central Asiatic origin. Jealously guarding their independence, for almost a century they bitterly fought Imperial Russia's advance into their domain. Their fierce fighting qualities form a large portion of Russian military lore. A child learned to ride before he could walk and to wield a dagger before using a knife.

To the Russian people the Caucasus always has been a region of romance, adventure, intrigue, ancient feuds, heroic exploits. It has inspired the most lasting creations of Russia's greatest national poet Pushkin, of its second greatest bard Lermontov, who died in a duel, and of Tolstoi, who spent the most adventurous part of his life there. His novels "The Cossacks" and "Hadji Murat," the latter of which immortalizes the great tribal Caucasian leader, and the short story "The Prisoner of the Caucasus" convey a faithful picture of some phases of life in the Caucasus during the past century. Georgia is not merely the birthplace of Stalin, but has also given many other revolutionary leaders.

The Caucasian peoples have not resented the Soviet rule, all the more since the Soviets have consistently encouraged the retention and promotion of the native dialects and cultures in keeping with their policy of complete cultural autonomy for all national groups. The fighting qualities of these people made even the most hardened and experienced Tsarist warriors quail. Their ancient fighting instincts will resurge when the Nazi attempts to hew their way through the narrow and treacherous mountain passes. For the Caucasus must be held for quadruple reasons of, first, preserving its oil for Russia, second, of keeping it from Hitler's grasp, third, of preventing the Nazi legions from closing in upon the Middle East, and Turkey, and fourth, of forestalling a junction between the brown and yellow Fascists along the Persian Gulf. The Caucasus is by reason of its economic and strategic significance truly one of the decisive fronts of this war.

W. G. Beall Meets Republican Chiefs

W. Glenn Beall, of Cumberland, Md., candidate for the Republican nomination for Representative from the Sixth Maryland District, visited Republican leaders in Montgomery County yesterday.

A dinner meeting was held last night at Kenwood Country Club, at which campaign plans, particularly organization of party workers for the campaign, were discussed.

Arthur J. Hilland of Bethesda will act as county manager of the Beall campaign until a permanent organization is completed.

American Bar Makes Freer Publicity Chief

Robert E. Freer, Federal Trade Commissioner, has been appointed national director of the American Bar Association's public relations program, it was announced yesterday by Walter P. Armstrong, association president.

The program will include "informative addresses" before civilian organizations and over radio hookups. It was believed it would be of "considerable aid in strengthening civilian morale," it was said.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

War Of Nerves At Home

THE BEST WAY I know to put wartime Washington in its proper perspective is to get away from it for a while. Only by looking back at the city and what is going on here, after one has gotten out of its tense atmosphere, is it possible to realize what a state of nerves we have developed. I heard many friends remark upon the relief they felt while visiting New York, Maine, Idaho, West Virginia and other parts of the country. But not until I had an opportunity of my own to shake off the frenzy of Washington for a brief period did I realize how tense the atmosphere hereabouts has become.

PUSEY

It is not surprising, of course, to find Washington more excited about the war than many other parts of the country are. After all, this city is the headquarters of the United Nations as well as of the United States. Preparations for the great world-wide struggle in which we are engaged are directed from Washington. News about the war, such as it is, flows out chiefly from this center. War plans and general strategy emanate from military and naval headquarters here. Thousands of Government employes are doing war work. No doubt they know more and talk more about the progress of the war than the rank and file of Americans.

Then, too, the routine of life in the Capital has been rather severely jarred by the influx of many thousands of new Government employes whom the city has not been prepared to receive. Overcrowded restaurants, streetcars, places of amusement, and so forth invariably give rise to a certain amount of friction. And the movement of old-line Government workers to other cities while streams of newcomers have been pouring through Union Station has intensified the confusion.

When all this has been said, however, it doesn't seem to explain the peculiar type of tension that is so evident here. In some degree the war has shaken the entire country out of routine habits. The Army has taken men from the farm, the grocery store, the factory and the WPA. War plants have brought about a revolutionary shifting of men and women workers. But the country has taken most of these changes in its stride. In Washington there are numerous indications that the Government has not yet taken in its stride the sweeping changes that global war demands.

I cannot avoid the impression that a good deal of the tension here is not a direct result of an intensified war effort. It is not the kind of excitement that results from hard work with a singleness of purpose to win a great cause. Rather it is shot through with confusion, with fear that we are not doing our best and with an uneasy realization that a tremendous amount of energy is going to waste.

We listen to eloquent official demands for a total war effort as the only way of matching the great strength that the Japs and the Nazis have acquired. Then we see hundreds of Federal employes in nonwar agencies twiddling their thumbs while the Government fills the city to overflowing with inexperienced new clerks, stenographers and so forth. We see, as the Tydings Committee recently pointed out, the frantic construction of temporary and permanent Government buildings, while an enormous amount of space in existing structures is not being efficiently utilized. We learn that equipment in vast quantities is being used on a part-time basis or not at all, while the war agencies are eagerly trying to get equipment of the same type.

An Army of publicity men is still turning out official news releases and undisguised propaganda, much of which has no bearing upon the war effort. It is difficult to reconcile such use of man power in the Capital with the work of Mr. McNutt to conserve man power in the country at large. The truth is that we are entering this total war with a crushing burden of peacetime bureaucracy still strapped to our back.

Added to these confusing circumstances is the spectacle of gigantic governmental agencies trying to stabilize our national economy by moving in opposite directions at the same time. Price Czar Henderson has the job of holding the cost of living in check. But his efforts are repeatedly undermined by the War Labor Board whose one consistent policy seems to be to push wages in general to higher levels. That conflict has come to be symbolic of the confused pulling and hauling which agitates Washington.

The people are told that the war demands unity of purpose and action. Yet in high places there is no such unity. Separate agencies are trying to control prices, wages, production of war supplies and utilization of man power without either a guiding policy or coordination of their efforts. Official Washington is thus threshing about with a great show of energy, but without direct pursuit of a single aim. The result is that few officials seem to know where they are at or how they are going to accomplish what must be accomplished if the war is to be fought to a successful conclusion.

In these circumstances it would be surprising if the city did not suffer from nervous reaction. We are on edge partly because we realize so keenly the importance of throwing our full national strength into this momentous struggle and partly because we see so much floundering and fumbling.

A certain amount of excitement stimulated by war is a valuable asset. It drives men and women to work harder and doubtless quickens their sense of loyalty to their country. Not all parts of the country have yet awakened to the realities of global war. A larger dose of war spirit would undoubtedly be good for areas where complacency still reigns. But such stimuli are most effective when there is an opportunity to devote increased energy to the accomplishment of definite tasks and objectives. When excitement is accompanied by confusion and a sense of either futility or frustration, there is grave danger that its victims will merely run around in circles.

Washington's strange "war of nerves" has by no means reached the point of jitters or paralysis. But it is certainly absorbing a great deal of energy that should be devoted to the single cause of winning the war.

Home Again to 'Madhouse Washington,' Finds Texas 'All Out for War'

Back at my desk once more after a vacation swing through the Middle West and a visit in my native Texas, I find myself looking at Our Town as if through the eyes of some of the people I've recently been hearing express themselves about what goes on in Washington. "Madhouse Washington," they call it . . . and proceed to give the reasons.

"Why you couldn't get me to that place now for anything," said a stanch Texan, who has given four sons to the war—two of whom have already lost their lives. "I tell you, before we start winning this war, people up there have got to forget their personal ambitions. They've got to think of this thing as a lose-the-war-lose-all proposition!"

I must say many persons in and around these parts could learn a lesson in patriotism from those Texans, who still are willing to make any sacrifice to help win this war. Like most Southerners (and don't you go telling me Texas is not part of the South; it is), they still think it's a disgrace to be drafted.

"We don't wait for that," said a physician in my hometown, who is giving up a huge private practice and leaving a wife and two children to take his place with the fighting forces.

"Chances are, I wouldn't actually have to go to war for quite a while," he said. "But if I waited around quietly until the draft board caught up with me—well, I'd never be able to hold up my head again."

His father was in the last World War; a grandfather fought in the Spanish-American War; a great-grandfather in the War Between the States, and a great-great-grandfather in the American Revolution. "You don't catch me letting that bunch down," he said.

Brag About Famous Sons

Sherman, Tex., my home town, is as bustling a center of wartime activity as I've seen in a long time. The Tenth Army Corps is stationed there, and an Air Corps keeps the countryside humming at nearby Perrin Field. Officers and their families have taken over some of the biggest homes and the best rooms at the largest hotel. You hear more war talk there than you do in Washington.

The Capital City comes in for a lot of general criticism over Texas supper tables, but nobody says a word against the President. "Roosevelt's doing the best he can . . . and if the country had listened to him a long time ago, we'd be a lot better off now," is the type of opinion you hear everywhere you turn.

Texans go starry-eyed, of course, when they talk about such famous fighting Texans as Admiral Nimitz and General Eisenhower. Another favorite son is House Speaker Sam Rayburn, who is now taking some time off for a rest on his ranch near Red River, and his home at Bonham. Well, you might call it a rest, except for the fact that his many friends won't allow him to have much. They crowd in on him by the dozens, daily . . .

There's a strong feeling that the dam, now being constructed over Red River, should be called the Rayburn Dam because the House Speaker was the outstanding force in helping to obtain a Government appropriation for it. That project, incidentally, is about the only thing besides the war that north Texans will talk about. They'll tell you it's to be "the greatest earth-filled dam in the world; that it's to be completed in a couple more years, and that it will create a lake with a 1300-mile shoreline . . .

Pappy Probably Returning

Most current cracker-barrel debates in Texas seem to turn on the senatorial campaign, now reaching the fever-heat stage. I asked dozens of Texans whether Jimmy Allred or Pappy O'Daniel would be the next Senator; didn't find a one who was for O'Daniel; yet the general impression seemed to be that, barring a miracle, Pappy would once more be passing biscuits in Washington just the same . . .

One thing Texans can't understand is the sentimental attitude of the rest of America about Lew Ayers, the conscientious objector, now serving as a hospital orderly at Camp Barkeley. A private now with the Tenth Army Corps, told me he had been in the same company with Ayers for a couple of weeks.

"Ayers is a nice enough guy, I guess," he began. And then he exploded. "But personally, I don't want no traffic with nobody who refuses to fight at a time like this! Thank God, there's not but one Lew Ayers at Camp Barkeley . . . or anywhere else in Texas! The less publicity that guy gets, the better for the rest of us." . . .

From the highly war-conscious Lone Star State, I went to Missouri for a few days; noted an entirely different attitude; not one of complacency, exactly, but rather a feeling that somehow the war is remote. Up in Donald Nelson's home town, however, there seemed to be a widespread opinion that everything will come out all right . . . all because of Nelson. Anybody around there can tell you, and will, that the WPB chief is one of the greatest men alive, and that it was a red-letter day in Hannibal last spring when Nelson stopped over there for a brief visit; spoke at a banquet; wept when his old friends presented him with a watch and declared that the happiest days of his life had been spent in the town first made famous by Mark Twain.

More Political Patter

In Louisiana, Mo., I picked up some political patter along with war talk. Seems former Gov. Harold Stark is quietly laying plans to run against Bennett Clark for the Senate in 1944.

"If the campaign were under way this year, Stark would win hands down," one voter told me, "but two years from now, when we've begun to pay off some of these wartime taxes, Clark's stock probably will be high again. You never can tell."

A few days later in Chicago, my friends expressed themselves sympathetically about my personal plight. Such a shame I had to rush back to that Washington madhouse; that Capital of confusion; that terrible city where the citizenry went in circles every minute.

In vain I pleaded that they need shed no tears in my behalf; that wartime Washington might be confusing, something of a madhouse, and not as comfortable as in former years . . . but that whatever it was, it was alive, and vital, and aware of the task at hand, and that given the choice of living anywhere in America today, I'd take Washington. "Madhouse" or not.

From Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, wife of the U. S. Minister to New Zealand, who is spending the summer in New Mexico, comes this letter which expresses much the same type of feeling I noted in my home State the past two weeks.

301 Hillside Ave.,
Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Dear H. R. M.:

I saw by the paper a few days ago that the President was about to make a Fireside Chat to tell the American people that they are too complacent about this war. He has always had such a remarkable understanding of the American people that I am sure he will not make this blunder.

Mrs. Hurley

The mothers of America are not complacent. The mothers of this beautiful States of New Mexico certainly know the seriousness of this war. The New Mexico National Guard was at Bataan and many of the mothers do not know whether their sons are alive or dead. These brave mothers are patient and uncomplaining. If there is anything the matter with the American people it is that they are suffering from a frustration complex, not from complacency. They are frustrated by what they think is the mismanagement of the war in Washington. They think the war is being lost there day by day.

This is one of the most beautiful parts of America and we love it. We are a household of women, even to the little granddaughter, because all of our men have gone to the war.

With every good wish. Cordially yours,
RUTH WILSON HURLEY.

New Secretary Arrives at Embassy Here

With almost as many letters after his name as in it, Dr. Mariano Antonio Barrenechea will be quite an addition to the diplomatic Blue Book when his name is included in its pages next month as First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy.

Recently arrived here from Mexico City, where he was Charge d'Affaires of the Argentine Embassy, Dr. Barrenechea had an academic career behind him before he entered the diplomatic service a few years ago. A graduate of the National University of Buenos Aires, where he received his LL. D. (he is a lawyer) and his Ph. D. (he was a professor of philosophy), the Argentine First Secretary is an author of note. With a number of works on Nietsche to his credit, Dr. Barrenechea has also been interested in the field of music and his history of music is the standard work of the kind in Argentina.

In the varied career of this youthful-faced, white-haired diplomat, he held a secretaryship—which in the Argentine judicial setup is the post just under a judgeship—and was a professor of esthetics at the Buenos Aires University.

Dr. Barrenechea started out his foreign service career as a Second Secretary at La Paz in Bolivia. From there he served a tour of duty in London, then to Mexico and now to Washington. Making his temporary headquarters at the Brighton Hotel, he is hoping that his wife, who is now in Mexico City, will join him here soon.

Cokes Wed at North Wales

A number of Army and Navy officers stationed in and around Washington took time out from service duties over the weekend to attend the wedding of a fellow-officer, Lieut. John Morton Coke, U. S. N. R., and Miss Ruth Larsen in Warrenton, Va., on Saturday.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Coke, who are now on their wedding trip will return to Washington soon to make their home. The bridegroom is stationed here.

North Wales, the Virginia home of Lieut. Walter P. Chrysler, jr., U. S. N. R., was the scene of the ceremony, at which the Rev. Paul Bowden officiated at 4:30 p. m. Lieutenant Chrysler, incidentally, received his commission with the bridegroom a few days ago.

Mrs. Coke is the daughter of Mrs. John Larsen of Portland, Oreg., and the bridegroom is the son of Judge and Mrs. John S. Coke, also of that city. Theodore R. Gamble, Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, gave the bride in marriage. She was attired in a gown of white silk jersey and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Charles P. Colborn of Chicago. Lieutenant Chrysler served as best man, and ushers were Lieut. Comdr. James A. Mitchell, Lieut. Charles M. Foster, Lieut. Richard H. Chase, Lieut. John M. Christie, Lieut. Douglas J. McFarlane and Lieut. Thomas H. Carroll, all of Washington.

Following the ceremony a reception for about 50 guests was held and the couple later left on a motor trip. Among the officers from this city attending the wedding were Lieut. Smith Bowman, Lieut. Alfred S. Cleveland, Lieut. C. Page Colborn and Lieut. Armistead Clay.

Uruguay Envoy, Mme. Blanco Return

Back in Washington after a trip to New York and Newport are the Ambassador of Uruguay and Mme. Blanco, who returned to their Mayflower apartment on Sunday.

The Uruguayan Ambassador and his wife spent a few days at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York before going to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's Newport home, Beaulieu, for a visit. While there they were Mrs. Vanderbilt's guests at a tea. Before returning to the Capital, they spent several days with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hays Sulzberger in their home in White Plains, N. Y.

C. G. Kurz and Bride in Evanston

Making their home in Evanston, Ill., where their marriage took place recently are two former Washingtonians, Charles Godfrey Kurz 4th and the former Miss Mabelle Claire Sessford.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Kurz is studying for his master's degree in engineering at Northwestern University in Evanston. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Sessford. The couple were united in marriage of August 8.

Both are graduates of George Washington University and are members of long established Washington families.

Return to Capital

Mrs. Lafayette Franklin, sr., and Mrs. John Hayes Davidson have returned to their homes in Washington after spending several days in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria. While there they visited Lieutenant Davidson who is stationed at Cape May, N. J.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Teter of Cumberland, Md., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Lillian Teter, to Clement Howard James, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Shearman James of Hyattsville, Md. The wedding took place June 16 in Charleston, S. C.

Casualty—

Pleasure Palace to Be New Base Hospital For Army Corps

By Peggy Preston

Another "casualty" of World War II will be recorded in Washington this week as the Greenbrier Hotel in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., a pleasure palace for 164 years, officially is turned over to the Government as a base hospital for combat troops. The owners of the famous hotel will meet representatives of the United States Medical Corps here within the next few days to make final arrangements for the transaction.

Thus will pass from the American scene a resort center that has survived four wars, only to succumb to the demands of a total war that leaves little place for the type of vacation life enjoyed so long by notables from all over the country.

Calls Change "A Revolution"

Loren R. Johnston, general manager of the Greenbrier, has already notified guests and employes that the hotel will close its doors on August 31. Details for the Army's occupancy will be made following the final meeting, but plans already are under way for the storing of approximately 2 million dollars worth of furniture and a vast quantity of equipment that went into the creation and maintenance of one of the country's largest hotels.

Mr. Johnston, for 50 years one of the Nation's leading hotel men, feels that the closing of the Greenbrier heralds a complete revolution in resort operation. In this he concurs with the great majority of leaders in the industry who believe that following the war the country will see a boom in the small, family type of resort.

"Economic conditions, before and after the war will bring about demands for the 100-room type of resort," Mr. Johnston said. "Increased cost of personnel, higher taxes and a reduction of incomes in the upper brackets will tend to make the operation of big resorts impractical."

The Florida East Coast will witness one of its greatest booms after the war, according to Mr. Johnston, who for many years was associated with the Flagler organization that was responsible for the development of the Nation's number one playground.

The magnificent hotels of the old regime that for the most part are now occupied by the armed forces in Florida will not play the role they were built for, he believes. In their place will be built hundreds of new, modern low priced hotels which will be available to all classes of people. The recent purchase of the Florida East Coast Railroad by the DuPont Co., he feels, will facilitate new and cheap means of transportation to Florida that in turn will help bring about a great postwar boom to the State.

Cottages Included In New Deal

In taking over the Geenbrier, the Army and Surgeon General's Office will acquire some 7500 acres of property, the hotel and cottages with 750 guest rooms and additional quarters for 750 staff members. It also includes three golf courses, a casino with tennis courts, a swimming pool and stables and a well equipped medicinal bathing establishment.

It is anticipated that the Army will install the most modern hospital equipment now available for the care of the more seriously wounded men brought there from the fields of combat.

In a simple ceremony yesterday at the home of her parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Paul H. Griffith, Miss Nancy Lee Griffith became the bride of Robert Raymond Sweene, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sweene of Mount Savage, Md.

Colonel Griffith holds the post of assistant executive in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War.

The Rev. Ivan Dugan, rector of the National City Christian Church, read the service at 6 o'clock before an improvised altar banked with garden flowers and tapers. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of marquisette, a fingertip veil of illusion and carried a bouquet of white roses.

Her only attendant was her cousin, Miss Elaine Oglevee of Uniontown, Pa. Francis Farrell of Mount Savage served as best man and the bride's brother, Paul H. Griffith, jr., was the only usher. Upon their return from a wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Washington, where the bridegroom is attending school at the Navy Yard.

Patchwork, Color Contrast Aid Dress Economy

Bright patches for pockets on your sweater or blouse don't mean you're covering up slits and holes. It means you're doing the latest step in victory fashions—utilizing fabrics from the scrap bag

Berets, large and small are the correct fall fashion notes. Here is one made of multi-colored sections that will be the dynamic flash to top a well-coiffed head

Borrowed from campus brothers is the idea of the football patches on elbows of sweater, blouse or jacket sleeves. You can even go so far as to make the patches using your college or sorority colors

Scrapbag Contributes To the Renovation Of Old Clothes

By Martha Ellyn

TIME was when patches meant poverty. Not so now. This year, patches make the news because they have gone pretty. They are fashion-smart. When you wear patches you show you are conservation minded, as the WPB has asked us to be with clothing fabrics.

The scrap bag has come into its own. Not that it hasn't always been a part of most thrifty households. But now it has become functional in a way that its oddments are being used for beauty rather than for utility alone. And the planning of the use of the left-over materials can be great fun. You will probably be reminiscing, too, as you recall how each piece of goods originally was used.

Patches used to be applied in such a way that only under the closest scrutiny could the handiwork be detected. When you tore your dress or coat, you delved into the scrapbag for a piece of matching material, then with the nimblest of fingers and the tiniest of stitches you mended the tear until only a close once-over would detect the camouflaging.

Contrast As Fashion

No longer do you obscure patches. The thing to do now is to bring them right out into the open, on your elbows, for pockets, to make a pixie hat or beret, or in a number of ways that a bright color contrast will give a dynamic flash.

Fashion also nods its fickle head in favor of two colors being better than one. That's good news. Perhaps you have some fine black woolen material that Aunt Susie brought from Australia some time ago. There isn't enough of it to make an entire dress. Don't let that disturb you. Buy some cyclamen-colored material, make a trim-fitting jacket out of it and then use the black for the skirt. The ensemble will pass for a fall suit.

Or you might make a chrome-yellow jacket and a black wool dirndl skirt and have a smart fall suit. Still other attractive two-color combinations being shown in fall fashions are mulberry and blue, rose and green, peacock blue and brown.

Varied Combinations

If it is the bizarre that pleases your fancy, it may be the contrasting of brilliant colors in out-of-the-ordinary combinations. The blouse body of your new fall dress may be black, while the sleeves vie with each other for attention. One sleeve can be a lush pink, the other a soft chartreuse. Or the combination of colors may be used as bands to trim the blouse, sleeves or the bottom of the skirt.

Creative genius, if you have any, can come to the front in the playing of bright colors to achieve an arresting costume. And in using the combination of colors you will also be doing your patriotic duty. The Government has been trying to avert dye shortages. They have suggested that we combine and mix colors, so there will not be a great amount of any one color used.

Other Contrast Uses

It is not only dresses and suits that have gone bicolored or tricolored. Many of the smart new bags being shown are made of contrasting materials. Bright bands can ornament the wrists of gloves. Perhaps your ski mittens will take on new appeal if a splash of color is added. You can even highlight your slippers and shoes with bright-colored patches if you want to carry the color from your head to your toes. Some of the shops are also showing hair bows with matching earrings made from an assembly of colored fabrics.

Credit Women To Breakfast

Fur Coats Tell Tales to Experts

By Wide World Features

It's not what your hand reveals but what your old fur coat tells, to an expert furrier. He can read your character with a glance at your fur coat.

Here are some observations of Harry Jay Treu of New York. Show him your fur coat and he'll tell you whether you are married or single, go to business by train or on foot, whether you have babies, whether you drink and how you do it—sitting or standing. He'll tell you if you smoke cigarettes, whether you dine out much or eat at home.

The secret of his fur-coat character analysis is watching for the wear-spots. If a coat is rubbed and worn at the left top back near the shoulder, the owner is an automobile driver. If a coat has two worn spots on the front near the hip bones the wearer is a mother who wheels a carriage.

Soroptimists Hold Summer Informals

The Soroptimist Club of Washington has recessed during the months of July and August, but during these months, members of the club meet informally at the Willard Hotel at 1 o'clock on Wednesdays.

Soroptimists on vacation from every part of the country drop in at these informal luncheons. Last week the club members entertained Miss Sidney Lunt, a member of the Soroptimist Club of Fort Worth, Tex.

Many of the members of the Washington Club are now on vacation. Miss Estelle Zirkin, president of the club, is spending her vacation at Providence, R. I., and the New England resorts. Miss Edna Connolly, first vice president, is vacationing in the Pocono Mountains. Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis is enjoying her vacation lodge at the Glen, in New York State. Dr. Margaret E. Miller has just returned from a vacation spent at Eaglesmere, Pa., and Mrs. Parkie Hysong had a delightful vacation on the Great Lakes.

The Soroptimist Club will open its fall session in the Little Cabinet Room of the Willard Wednesday, September 2.

CROSSE & BLACKWELL'S ORIGINAL CHOW CHOW

She Can Wear 'Em!

Jane Wyatt, movie actress, here demonstrates how to wear slacks with dash. Her formula is a trim hipline, which Ida Jean Kain in accompanying story tells how to obtain

Bulky Hips In Slacks Win No Hoorays

By Ida Jean Kain

WOMEN look better in slacks than in shorts and better in skirts than anything else. Slacks cover up but they do not disguise and certainly do not flatter the figure. But we'll all be wearing them because they are so comfortable and practical.

The men say no woman should look as bad in slacks as some do and that the main trouble is that we won't go to a good tailor. No, we probably won't. We like buying our clothes ready made.

One of the secrets of success with slacks lies in the choice of material—it should have enough body so that it can hold its own shape.

Trim Hipline Necessary

But to wear slacks with dash, you must have a trim hipline. That you get and keep only with toning exercise. It may help to know that as few as three well-chosen hip slimmers will trim you down.

Begin with this one:

Lie on your side on the floor with both legs straight down, one on tops of the other. Raise the upper leg, knee straight, from the hip, upward and slightly back. Hold, then lower. Repeat 12 times then shake your leg until the muscles are loose and limber. Rest, and perform with other leg. Afterward, roll over on your back and relax.

Flip back into the same starting position on side, except that you have the upper leg raised. Swing leg away out in front, then up and out in back. Try to keep your foot the same height from the floor in the front swing and elevate it slightly in the back swing. Continue for 12 counts and gradually increase to 25 with each leg.

The Shuttle Movement

Now, on your back on the floor again. Raise both legs straight up in air, and shuttle back and forth from the hips. Do this for 12 counts now and gradually increase to 25. Relax for several seconds when you finish this one.

As soon as you get your strength back, return to that same position—on back, legs straight up in air. Separate the legs in a wide V, hold, then bring legs together. Try to keep knees straight and legs at right angle with hips as you do the exercise.

War Shortage Aids Women Doctors

The growing shortage of medical practitioners in many communities, due to the demands of the armed services, is giving a break to America's women's physicians, who had difficulty in establishing themselves, according to Tab magazine.

In New York and other large cities, hospitals are opening more interneships to women, and medical schools expect a larger enrollment by women this autumn.

Star Tells Secret Of Agile Feet

Hollywood, Calif.—One of the most restful beauty aids for summer is suggested by Alexis Smith, movie star.

Alexis, who has studied dancing for years and danced professionally with ballets, knows the value of caring for the feet, not only from the standpoint of comfort but from the standpoint of beauty.

"A person whose feet are tired, regardless of the reason, cannot help but reflect that feeling in the line of her body, her humor and facial expression," said Alexis.

"I have a little trick that I employ which has been most helpful in summer months when heat seems bent on concentrating its intensity in the feet," continued Alexis. "In the evening, just before retiring, I bathe my feet in hot epsom salts, then massage them with vaseline or a fine oil, draw socks over them (only to protect the sheets from the oil) and go to bed. Believe it or not, the next morning they feel wonderfully soft, and when I put my shoes on, I can almosts swear that my feet are a size smaller."

Wall Street Accountants

THERE IS A LOT of backstage indignation over the manner in which members of one Wall Street accounting firm, Haskins & Sells, dominate the cost accounting work of the Army and Navy.

PEARSON

Cost accounting, under cost plus contracts, is extremely important. Furthermore, the Army and Navy are both engaged in scaling down some of these contracts through Price Adjustment Boards. The men who rule on these price adjustments can save the Government billions of dollars—or on the other hand they can permit billions in profits to industry.

It so happens that executives from Haskins & Sells occupy key accounting posts. It also happens that Haskins & Sells is the accounting firm which handles the work of General Motors and duPont, two companies which have received very large Government orders.

On the Navy's Price Adjustment Board is George P. Auld, a member of the Haskins & Sells firm. High in the Army's cost and supply service is Brig. Gen. Arthur H. Carter, a partner of Haskins & Sells, and son-in-law of Sells.

Then in the cost accounting branch of the War Production Board is Dr. Thomas H. Sanders, professor of accounting at the Harvard Business School, who has been close to Haskins & Sells and has done some work for the Haskins & Sells Foundation.

Another member of Haskins & Sells is Lieut. Col. Andrew Stewart, now in the accounting branch of the War Department.

Carter and Auld patriotically served in the Army and Navy during World War I, and in their present positions they are careful to have the accounts of their former clients supervised by other Army and Navy accountants.

One such client, General Motors, has more than two billions in war contracts, and the scaling of these contracts by even 1 per cent would mean a saving to the Government and a loss to the company of 20 million dollars.

Meanwhile, the Securities and Exchange Commission on August 4 made public a report bitterly condemning Haskins & Sells for "obviously manipulated" financial statements in the Associated Gas & Electric case.

"The accounting firm," according to the SEC, "lacked independence."

Yet members of this same firm now sit in high Army-Navy positions where they will need to exercise great independence.

Hull on Vichy

MUCH-LOVED CORDELL HULL occasionally opens up to his close friends and gives his own inside views on important diplomatic situations.

Talking to them the other day, he gave his version of the very controversial State Department policy toward the Vichy government, somewhat as follows:

CORDELL HULL

"People say I am fond of Vichy," he explained, "but I know what the Vichy government is up to. However, every week or so the British have come to me and said: 'Don't break relations, we need you. You are serving the best purpose by maintaining your present position.'

"Of course, it would have been better," continued Secretary Hull, "if the French had gone to Africa. And Mr. Bullitt—who is a very fine man—had instructions to follow the French government to Bordeaux and Toulon and then to Africa.

"But Mr. Bullitt—who is a very fine man—remembered another Ambassador who had made a great name for himself by staying in Paris during the last war (Myron T. Herrick), and Mr. Bullitt wanted to make a great name for himself, too.

"So he stayed in Paris. And I had to send Mr. Biddle with the French government. Mr. Biddle is a very fine man, but the French did not know him. He had no influence with them. And so the French government never went to Africa."

NOTE: Many neutral diplomats agree with Secretary Hull that Ambassador Bullitt, who was on the most intimate terms with Premier Daladier and other members of the French cabinet, might have been able to persuade them to set up a separate government in North Africa had he accompanied the cabinet on its exit from Paris. President Roosevelt himself had counted on the French setting up a government in North Africa and continuing the fight from there.

"Pass-the-Biscuits-Pappy"

WHITE HOUSE ADVISERS say that the President was not much concerned about the victory of ardent isolationist Congressman Ham Fish in F. D. R.'s own district. Fish's renomination was expected and the real battle will be at the polls in November.

But the President's friends make no secret of the fact that he is very much concerned and wants to do everything he can for Judge Jimmy Allred, who is running against Senator "Pass-the-Biscuits-Pappy" O'Daniel in Texas.

Pappy is the man who is "not much worried about the war." And Allred is the former judge and former Governor of Texas whom the President persuaded to resign from the bench to run against Pappy.

It is now recognized around the White House that the President made a big mistake, not by persuading Allred to run, but by failing to appoint his successor until shortly before the primary. Result was that the people of Texas got the idea Allred would get his judgeship back if defeated.

All during June and July, Allred urged the President to appoint a new judge to take his place. But like a lot of things in Washington, it got snarled up in red tape. Senator Tom Connally wanted the judgeship to go to his son—who had very excellent qualifications. And the question was mulled pro and con until Allen B. Hannay finally got the job—but so late that many people were unaware of it and still thought Allred would be reappointed.

Today, however, the President has sent word to all his political advisers to go down the line for Allred in every way possible. He feels that the re-election of a Senator who "isn't worried about the war" would be a slap not at the White House but at the most vital thing facing the American people—successful prosecution of the war.

5000 in Post Square Hail 'Bond Wagon'—Dorsey Driving

TOMMY DORSEY AND HIS BAND (FOREGROUND) PLAY FOR "BOND WAGON" RALLY

Appearing in grease paint, direct from the stage here, Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra yesterday blared a question at 5000 cheering citizens in Post Square.

It was:

"Any bonds today?"

Opening a series of similar Post Square Monday "Bond Wagon" programs, the man with the glad trombone gave his audience of all ages and many occupations 30 minutes of melody. At the end of it his songster, Frank Sinatra, and other stars, gave 20 minutes' worth of autographs to several hundred persons, mostly young, who seemed frenzied.

Dorsey spoke, too, saying, "Your country want you to join the 10 Per Cent Club. Invest 10 per cent of your regular income in United States bonds every week or payday. Then you're a real 10 percenter!

"And as soon as the employes where you work are investing 10 per cent of the payroll in bonds, you're entitled to the patriotic 10 Per Cent Club emblem, the red, white and blue window stickers and the cheerful lapel button, sign of patriotism, that no good American wants to be without," the maestro told the crowd.

Then they played "Dig Down Deep."

Bonds will get a good airing out in the square every Monday now. The programs are sponsored by the War Activities Committee of the Washington Theaters (Dorsey came from Loew's yesterday) in cooperation with the District War Savings Committee. They will include Hollywood personalities when possible to get their services, it was announced. Well-known orchestras will appear. WRC's "Timekeeper," Bill Herson, will be master of ceremonies at all programs.

All of the Monday programs, like the one yesterday, will be timed at 1:30 p. m. to accommodate the lunch-hour crowds.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. Is Installing Health Program

A health program for Federal employes will be installed piecemeal in Government agencies. Office of Emergency Management and its many constituent agencies—Office of Price Administration, War Production Board, Lend-Lease, Board of Economic Warfare, and the others—soon will hire Public Health Service doctors to treat employes at the emergency rooms. The rooms now have only nurses. OEM has funds it can use legally for the health program. However, some of the old-line agencies hesitate to participate without the specific approval of Congress. The President is reported to be sympathetic toward the program and he may order it set up on an interdepartmental basis.

PREDICTION: It was made yesterday by an important and influential Government official who has had much to do with WPB. He said that WPB would be given a thorough housecleaning of its business-as-usual and ho-hum officials in a matter of weeks. Replacements will be more aggressive and militant persons who can make up their minds in a reasonable length of time. No more reorganizations will be made on paper. That's been tried too many times before and always with the same net results. Now the big obstacle is finding the right man to do the cleaning up. Mentioned are Bernard M. Baruch and Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Fewer Press Releases

Office of War Information Chief Elmer Davis has called on Government press agents to cut production of press releases for the duration . . . National Housing Agency provides housing for others but it can't do the same job for itself. Its offices at 1600 I Street Northwest, are inadequate and some officials haven't even desks. The merger of Wage and Hour Division with Labor's Division of Public Contracts is being speeded. Tentative plans call for the transfer to New York City of some public contract employes. A unit of the combined agencies will be established and a few Wage and Hour employes who were moved to New York will be transferred back here.

National Parks Service officials are now in a sweat. The agency, on instructions from Public Buildings and Budget Bureau, must move to Chicago on August 28. The 122 employes have sold their homes, given up their apartments and are just about all packed up and ready to go. But no office space is available for them in Chicago and it's anyone's guess when it will be ready. Fish and Wildlife moved over the weekend only to find painters, carpenters, and mechanics working in the offices they are supposed to occupy. FBA had eight months to get the office space ready and still it wasn't able to deliver.

Census Bureau employes out at Suitland, or some of them, have just discovered that they'll have to pay four income taxes next year. One to Maryland, another to the District, still another to the Federal Government, and a fourth to the home where they claim legal residence. Director J. C. Capt brought up this fact in his introduction of Senator Radcliffe to the employes the other day and invited the Senator to discuss the subject. He didn't. Incidentally, it's now about certain that another agency will have to be moved to Suitland. Census won't be able to occupy the entire building.

FWA Sitting Down

Federal Works Agency is undergoing a sifting down process. Several thousand employes recently were let off by WFA and now FWA has separated several hundred from its regional offices. FWA is one agency that's definitely contracting but its mapping out a vast expansion post-war program . . . Arthur Altmeyer, executive director of the slow-moving War Man Power Commission, is going to Chile to read a paper on the progress of social security. Some people are questioning the timeliness of his trip . . . Commerce Department and Federal Works Agency both will set up committees to receive suggestions from employes on improvement of the Federal service.

War Man Power has kicked around the plans to revise the rules on the transfer of employes from one agency to another. Best information now is that the President will issue an executive order on the subject. It will give the Civil Service Commission authority to transfer persons from one agency to another irrespective of priority ratings. Some are insisting that the commission's decision be mandatory, regardless of the wishes of the employe.

Mother's Plea Granted

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 17 (AP).—A mother's plea to see her soldier-son has been answered by President Roosevelt. Vernon Twigg enlisted four years ago and spent most of the time in Hawaii. He recently returned to California and his mother, Mrs. Claude Twigg, wrote the President asking that the youth be allowed to come home. The request was granted.

Greenways' Tenants Open Their Case

Counsel for tenants in the Greenway rent controversy opened their inning last night by attempting to show that Greenway apartments—where a rent increase is proposed—are less attractive since the war began because of their proximity to "military objectives."

The "surprise" move by attorneys for protesting tenants came at the conclusion of a two and one-half hour hearing at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, where proposed rent hikes are now on trial before the Office of Administration of Rent Control.

Other developments of the hearing included:

1. Denial by the commission of a motion by tenants' counsel to dismiss the landlord's petition to increase rents, on the grounds that the latter had failed to show any "peculiar circumstances" justifying such increases.

2. Introduction of a counter-petition by tenants for adjustment of rent or service.

3. Testimony of the first witness for tenants, Nathaniel Eiseman, insinuating that Buckingham Village Apartments in Arlington, Va., renting at approximately the same figures as Greenway units, are more desirable.

4. Failure of attorneys for the tenants to draw from Ralph Hisle, manager of the Morris Cafritz-owned Greenway Apartments, the specific factors which led him and Cafritz to decide upon an increase in rents.

Not Fashionable, Witness Says

As the hearing drew to a close, Attorney Cyril Heilemann asked Witness Minar Chamblin of 141 Anacostia Road whether in his opinion Greenway, Inc., was "near military objectives."

The question drew a sarcastic rejoinder from opposing counsel, but was allowed.

Chamblin said the apartments were near the Navy Yard, the Potomac power plant, the PEPCO power plant and a railroad.

Chamblin was then asked if, in his opinion, the apartments were in "a fashionable district."

He replied, "They are not."

Eiseman's description of Buckingham Village, where he is a tenant, was one of a working man's Utopia as he compared his home with units in Greenway he had visited. He said in answer to counsel for tenants that there were "no rodents, no sooty air, no railroad noise" at Buckingham. He recalled that rents were raised recently at Buckingham, but that the rent control commission had ordered them reduced to their original level.

Hisle, on the other hand, told the commission he believed the proposed rent increases to be "absolutely fair," that he had compared—favorably—Greenway to other developments, and that he regarded the Cafritz project as one of the most pleasant places to live in the District.

He said rent disparities between some apartments were due to difference in site and other physical advantages.

The counterpetition introduced last night asked that the maximum rent ceiling at Greenway "other than Group IV and Group VI" be fixed at the lowest rental rate now charged for comparable accomodations in Group I. (The latter rates are from $39.50 to $52.50); and that the maximum rent ceiling in Groups IV and VI be fixed at the lowest rental now charged for comparable units in Group IV ($41.50 to $51.)

Robert F. Cogswell, rent control administrator, said last night that a letter to him from Richard A. Harman, Evans Building, protesting participation in the trial by Attorney E. L. Hollis, tenants' counsel, was "under consideration." Hollis' appearance was protested on the ground he is not a member of the District bar.

Another session will be held tonight at 7:30.

Police Probe Killings

Woman Found Beaten to Death; Another Slain, Husband Shot

One Washington woman was beaten to death last night and another woman was fatally shot and her husband seriously wounded.

Mrs. Pattie Edwards, 40, was found by police, almost nude, in the living room of her home at 500 Third Street Northwest. She had been beaten on the head and died of a fractured skull, police said. A man found in her apartment was held for investigation at the First Precinct Station.

Police, summoned to the home to quell a disturbance, found the apartment in disorder and a blood-spattered electric fan near the body of the woman.

In the other slaying, Mrs. Helen Hall, 22, Negro, of 645 Morton Place Northeast, was shot four times at her home. Wounded, she climbed through a window and fell two floors to the ground.

Summoned by a neighbor, Police Private Louis Girard, Ninth Precinct, arrived to find the dead woman's husband, Makidy Hall, 37, on the front porch with a bullet wound in his abdomen. He was treated at Casualty Hospital and later removed to Gallinger Hospital, where his condition was said to be serious.

Coupon Ration of Fuel Oil Predicted by Rep. Hartley

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Aug. 17.—Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr., of Kearny predicted tonight that coupon rationing of fuel oil on the Eastern Seaboard would be established after September 15 and urged sweeping revision of the Government's rationing set-up to relieve the East Coast petroleum shortage.

The Republican Congressman recommended that gasoline rationing be extended to other States, that all control of petroleum products be vested with a single authority and that the present coupon rationing system be supplanted by dealer rationing to reduce "hardships and abuses."

Addresses Dealers

Hartley, vice chairman of a special House committee studying the gasoline, fuel oil and rubber shortages, spoke at a meeting of New Jersey gasoline and fuel oil dealers.

"I say the answer to this shortage can be had by extending the gasoline rationing program to the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, the unrationed portion of District 1, and many other sections of the country where transportation other than by pipeline is the means of obtaining petroleum products," Hartley said.

"In the interest of efficiency, I say that all control of petroleum products should be placed under one head and that all public statements on the subject be used by one office."

Calls Plan a Mistake

Basing his statements on the committee's preliminary report and "my own independent observations," Hartley said coupon rationing of fuel oil would be a "mistake."

He predicted that unless rationing is extended, "we will have many a gasless day, that many a home will be without heating fuel and that many an industry may have to be shut down by reason of the lack of heavy oil." He urged immediate action—"not after the November elections are over."

Share-Car Canvassers Get Rough Treatment

Some of the volunteer workers in the District's door-to-door "Share Your Car" canvass are getting pretty well "fed up" with the sort of reception they get at some houses.

A few of them are even quitting because—as one put it—they "don't like being insulted," the Department of Vehicles and Traffic reported yesterday. Volunteers report getting replies such as:

"I'm not going to fill out any questionnaire. It's just giving information so that the Government can confiscate my car."

Then there was the woman who shouted, "I ain't answering any more questions!" and slammed the door, catching the volunteer's thumb. The thumb is swollen, and the volunteer is very unhappy about the whole business.

A more common but just as uncooperative reply received is: "I've filled out enough questionnaires . . . I'm not going to do any more."

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Public Welfare Chief Conrad Van Hyning, who is director of civilian mobilization for this area, in a joint statement yesterday asked householders to receive the "Share Your Car" representatives, who are giving their time freely, with courtesy, even if they are not interested in joining the group riding plan. Some 3500 volunteers are working to cover completely 5600 city blocks.

"We realize," said Van Duzer and Van Hyning, "that some of us may find it a little irksome to fill out various types of questionnaires. But at the same time we must realize that these are not normal times and we must all do a few things which might otherwise be distasteful. This program is essential to our war effort."

No Tires, but Recaps Expected for OCD

James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, yesterday expressed doubt that civilian defense workers would be eligible for more than recapping privileges under the Nation's tire rationing program.

In a letter of interpretation to regional directors he said he believed the worker would have to prove the principal use of his car was for civilian defense to get even that.

To offset the dearth of transportation thus seen in the offing, Director Landis urged three civilian defense groups—the Civil Air Patrol, the Aircraft Warning Service and the Forest Fire Fighters Service—to get together and set aside certain of their automobiles to be used "principally" for trips to and from their posts.

"It is most likely," he said, "that if CAP members in a particular locality designate one or more cars to be used only for CAP purposes they will be entitled to a tire certificate. The vehicles would then be used principally to transport workers to and from a military or naval establishment.

"Recappe dtires will be available in view of the fact that the work done by CAP members is essential to rosecution of the war."

The same ruling would be given to members of the aircraft warning and forest fire fighting services, he said. New tires will be available for vehicles used in fire fighting, he said if they are used "exclusively" to maintain this service.

While regular civilian defense workers must go through the process of proving they get reimbursed for mileage before being able to count their cars as needed officialyl, Diector Landis said the three special groups would not be required to do this—if they followed his advice and organized.

Tax Exemption Bill Hearings May End Today; Shortages May Alter Hospital Expansion Plans

Lack of Laboratory, Building Materials Threaten Program

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Shortages in critical construction and laboratory materials, and also in doctors and nurses, may seriously alter the hospital expansion program planned for metropolitan Washington when $17,500,000 for "community facilities" was appropriated under procisions of the Lanham Act six weeks ago.

Before the five million dollars earmarked for hospitals can be released, the Federal Works Agency said yesterday in reply to Senator McCarran's demand for speedy action in a crisis, a survey "to satisfy the War Production Board" must be completed.

Under a recent criteria agreement with the WPB, FWA can ask only for enough materials to insure four hospital beds for each thousand persons in the area to be served. To clear the request, an airtight survey must be furnished WPB of population, beds already available, and the number of doctors and nurses needed to service new rooms.

Health Service Cooperates

The United States Public Health Service is cooperating with the FWA in the survey and in working out possible ways in which substitutes can be used where vital material shortages exist. This survey should be ready this week, the FWA declared yesterday.

Transportation facilities also must be covered in the study. The erection of small one-story temporary hospitals in the suburban areas was visualized when Congress started consideration of the overcrowded hospital problem in January, after constant spurring by Commissioner Guy Mason and medical groups who pointed out congested conditions throughout the District and environs.

When the survey is completed, it will be decided whether additions to existing hospitals should be accented exclusively or whether both new structures and additions should be insisted upon. Also under consideration is the possibility of having nurses move out of hospital and dormitory rooms to make way for patients, the nurses becoming roomers in nearby homes.

Three Allotments Made

Three allotments have been made from the $17,500,000 appropriated for community facilities, the FWA said—$235,000 for recreation areas; $1,982,000 for utilities and facilities for the 10 dormitories to be erected for Government girls on the old Arlington Farms and $167,000 for facilities needed for dormitories to be erected at Suitland, Md.

"We think releases of the District money will come more rapidly now," the FWA said. "The Vital Area Board will speed things up considerably."

Members of the Vital Area Board for Washington were appointed last week as follows: Reid W. Digges, of FWA, chairman; John Nolan, jr., chief planning officer for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Commander H. M. Cogan, Navy Department; Brig. Gen. C. W. Kutz, Engineer Commissioner for the District; Willard F. Day, National Housing Agency; G. R. Parker, Federal Security Agency.

When members of the board agree on priority needs for a project the WPB is supposed "really to listen." The board also will have value as a clearing house for requests from all directions.

OPA Delays Naming Gas Bootleggers

Names of alleged gasoline bootleggers under investigation by the District auditors office will be withheld at the request of the OPA until that body has had time to make its own investigation, Auditor A. Ray Pilkerton announced last night.

The names of the 20 dealers who are supposed to have sold over 210,000 gallons of smuggled gasoline before July 22 were to have been submitted to the Commissioners yesterday. However, a last-minute conference with OPA legal advisers led Pilkerton to hold up the delivery of his report until today, when he will confer with the Commissioners, the corporation counsel and representatives of the OPA.

In addition to these 20 dealers, Pilkerton said he would report the name of a single dealer who allegedly obtained between 1500 and 1600 gallons of gas "by secretive methods." The single alleged violator, according to Pilkerton, will be charged with one or more of the following offenses:

Failure to pay the District gas tax, failure to pay the licensing fee for gasoline importation, failure to have the tank truck carry the necessary identification signs required by police regulations and selling cut-rate gas at high-test prices.

Only the last two charges can be made against the 20 major violators, however, as they paid the tax on their bootleg gasoline, and are licensed dealers, Pilkerton said.

Too Much Gadding About Costs Donald, a Duck, His Liberty

NOT SO DUCKY FOR DONALD—Paul Thompson, 14, built this pen to keep his errant duck, Donald, at home

A 6-month-old white duck named Donald has lost his liberty and more or less permanently, too, because he wasn't satisfied with having the run of the yard at 1334 Farragut Street Northwest, the home of his master, Paul Thompson, 14.

Donald wandered in search of greener pastures for the first time about two weeks ago, when he wound up in the District pound. There he repined with some indignation for several days before Paul learned where he was and took him home.

The truant made no further attempts to crash the fence of the Thompson home until Sunday afternoon, when the urge to go places got the best of him again. He had wandered only a block or so this time, however, before he was again in the hands of the law.

A cop nabbed Donald as he addled across Farragut Street with high disdain for passing vehicles, but luckily for Donald he was saved from another stretch in the pound by a neighbor who happened to be walking by. The neighbor told the cop where Donald lived and Donald soon again was back home.

And this time he's likely to remain there. Paul went to work yesterday with a hammer, saw and some boards and quickly put together a cage for the errant Donald.

A fowl trick, we call it.

U.S.O. Assails Phony Benefits Using Service Men as Pawns

The War Hospitality Committee of the U. S. O. last night adopted a resolution condemning the soliciting of donations for entertainment of service men "under the guise of patriotism" by unrecognized agencies.

The action followed a report of Miss Sally Muchmore, representing the Better Business Bureau, in which she said at least five organizations are now or have been peddling tickets for boat rides and dances for "benefit of service men," but which actually, in some cases, were also for benefit of the solicitors.

She said one organization, which has been selling tickets since May for a boat ride scheduled for the latter part of August, "has no written contract with the promoter, and actually admits it will receive 50 per cent of the 'take.'

"The money is admittedly to send delegates of the organization to a convention," Miss Muchmore charged. "By entertaining the soldiers they hope to send delegates to a convention!"

She said the organization, whose name she declined to disclose, was now in the midst of a disagreement with the national orgnaization and is not recognized. "Yet patriotism is their appeal," she added.

She said "it would take some of the transports now on duty in the Atlantic" to accommodate as many on a boat ride as telephone inquiries indicated were interested. She said other groups were soliciting for "benefit" dances and boat rides, scheduled for August and September.

"I feel that if this committee has a worthy job to do in the community this kind of thing can't be permitted to go on."

The committee's resolution urged the public to cooperate by "not making donations to unknown individuals who solicit over the phone" and by investigating all requests for funds through some recognized agency, such as the Better Business Bureau, the Association of Merchants and Manufacturers, or others.

It was reported that the Hospitality Committee already had declined to sell 100 tickets for one benefit group and had returned the tickets.

Floyd D. Akers, chairman, presided at the monthly meeting, held at Taft House Inn.

Committee Hears Representatives of Religious Groups

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

The Senate District Committee will seek to conclude today its week-long series of hearings on the institutional tax exemptions bill, following anl all-day session yesterday with representatives of religious organizations.

Principal testimony yesterday was given in behalf of various Catholic religious orders here and several Protestant church homes.

The former once more raised the problem which the committee has yet to solve of how to reword the bill to exempt the Catholic University houses of study and monastery. Though admittedly religious institutions, with charitable and educational functions, they have been been found difficult to provide for without making the statute dangerously broad.

Leo A. Rover and the Rev. Paul Breagy, appearing for the Franciscan Monastery, revealed that the Commissioners had replaced the building on the tax rolls, despite the fact that church services are held there daily.

No Regular Congregation

They explained that because the institution has no regular congregation, it is difficult to classify it as a church under a strict interpretation of present law. They asked that the new bill be rewritten to omit the congregation requirement for exemption.

The Rev. Thomas A. McCawley and John D. Fitzgerald, testifying for Holy Redeemer College, one of the C. U. houses of study, also urged a revision of either the religious or educational sections.

Their institution is operated by a religious order, Houses student priests taking advanced work at the university, and conducts some classes in its own building, yet would not be exempted unless some special provision is made.

The Episcopal Home for Children, the Presbyterian Home, the Baptist Home, the Lutheran Home for the Aged and the Convent of the Visitation were also among the groups represented, concerned primarily with the question of taxing so-called excess land.

School Raises Same Problem

They asked provisions to insure that land "reasonably" used for the institution's functions or intended for expansion will not be taxed so long as it is not used commercially. Such property was replaced on the tax rolls through the recent investigation by the Commissioners.

The same problem was raised with respect to the Maret School by Miss Louise Maret and Mrs. Izetia Jewel Miller.

Last witness of the day was John D. Bradley, representing the Freethinkers of America, who urged that religious organizations be given no tax exemption whatsoever. He asserted that the tax-free status amounted to a governmental subsidy of religion, contrary to the democratic principle of separation of state and church.

Too Much War, So Art Exhibit Is Brightened

The "impact of war" proved so great in the British poster display in tre Longfellow Building on Connecticut Avenue that the exhibit was brightened up yesterday by the addition of some lighter paintings.

Approximately 5000 came to see the display over the weekend. In addition to filling the large Longfellow windows the posters and paintings now also fill the lobby.

How Like the Busy Bee, But He Will Be Here

Edward Arnold in East on Thousand Errands; C. U. to Premiere Potential Broadway Play; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

ALTHOUGH HE IS KEPT BUSIER than that one-armed paperhanger, it is a safe assumption that Edward Arnold really will be on hand for the world premiere of "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," at Loew's Capitol Theater some time next month, as proclaimed in this space yesterday.

EDWARD ARNOLD

Mr. Arnold, popular favorite of Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players, in an earlier incarnation, already is in the East, frittering away his time performing the duties of president of the Screen Actors Guild and a dozen other administrative chores, appearing on two network broadcasts, conferring with Treasury officials on the motion picture industry's billion-dollar War Bond drive in September and planning his own visits to some 15 cities, in which he will personally lend a hand to the Man with the Whiskers in selling War Bonds and Stamps.

Instead of making bricks to occupy his leisure, Eddie has found time to squeeze in costellar appearances with Fay Bainter in the aforesaid "Hadley" item and in "Eyes in the Night," the picture in which Ann Harding returns to the screen.

Outside of these minor preoccupations, he has practically nothing to do.

A memorandum on the letterhead of the OPM, over signature of Horace Walker, executive secretary of the D. C. Salvage Committee, vitaminizes a lethargic outpost by saying, "You have been appointed a member of the entertainment committee for the National Salvage Rally, to be held at Griffith Stadium, August 24, at 8 p. m. Your chairman is Mr. Richmond B. Keech, District Building." Anyway, the chairmanship is in safe and able hands. And the rally is going to be okay, too. Already, through the courtesy of the Tuskegee Institute, the famous "Sons of the South" male quartet, recently featured in the National Victory broadcast programs; Lucy "Star Spangled Banner" Monroe, the United States Army Air Forces Band, under the direction of Lieut. Alf Helberg, and others to be made known shortly, are included in the program. When completely rounded up, it's going to be a whale of a show.

Off the Cutting-Room Floor

The items that had to be scissored out of yesterday's column in all unpremeditated space salvage drive ran something like this:

Continuing its policy of maintaining a close relationship between the tributary theater and the New York professional stage, Catholic University's speech and drama department, under the direction of Father Gilbert V. Hartke, this week will premiere a new comedy, "Child's Play," which one of Broadway's most eminent producers hopes to present in the fall. Written by Jacques Blanchard, it will run Thursday through Sunday, Auguct 20-23, inclusive, with Alan Schneider directing.

The Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription list for the new season at the National Theater already has passed the 5000 mark, with another 1500 on the "waiting list"—"waiting" until Sales Manager Bess Davis Schreiner can fight her way out of the avalanche of applications under which she is buried.

We bow low and apologetically to a considerable number of the burghers and the National Theater box-office for having precipitated a fruitless early week drive on the ticket window by announcing here a week ago today that the seat sale for "My Sister Eileen" had opened the day before, instead of on the customary Thursday preceding the first performance. But that is what the bulletin, mailed in by a departing, itinerant publicist, said, and we thought we were doing all concerned a favor by making ticket-shopping easy rather than futile. Probably in a hurry to catch his train. Sorry. Advance seat sales at the National open Thursday, same as always.

Tonight at 8:45, the Willard Roof Music Hall Players will inaugurate their fifth consecutive week of the "Gay Nineties" production of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," world-famous "temperance drama." The olio acts that have been a riot at every performance during the past four weeks will, of course, be continued, plus "Lady Yukona" Cameron's invitational "Meet Me in St. Louie, Louie," speculative "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now?" and blondined "The Band Played On," and Helen Ault's assumption of the Bibi Osterwald conceits.

In conjunction with first Washington showings of "Inside Fighting Russia," feature of the current bill, Manager Roland Robbins, of the Trans-Lux Theater, has turned his lobby over to a striking exhibition of lithographs and posters recently received from the Soviet Union and displayed for the benefit of Russian War Relief. The display has been arranged by Edward Rowan, assistant chief, Section of Fine Arts, Department of the Interior, and Mrs. Fern Mosk of California. Contributions toward medical relief for Russia are being accepted by American Red Cross and American Women's Voluntary Services units throughout the daily operating hours of the house—also in the lobby.

"My Sister Eileen," which only last March afforded the Capital two weeks of resounding hilarity at the National Theater, last night returned to the same stage for a similar period of occupancy with the same cyclonic results.

This widely and deservedly celebrated Max Gordon production of the comedy so sagewdly derived by Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov from the New Yorker sketches by Ruth McKenney is still, as we see by the ads we characterized it last spring, "The loudest laugh of the season." We adhere to that appraisal, as of 1942-43, young as this new season is, in the conviction that no audience is apt to out-lung or out-volume last evening's near-capacity house when it comes to rattling the rafters with laughter. It should be so. "My Sister Eileen" is by far the modern theater's most titivating version of the feverishly frantic tale of the "Babes in the Woods," with at least one of them being perpetually pursued by all manner of "wolves."

When the two Sherwood girls, Ruth and her younger sister, Eileen, came on to New York from Columbus, Ohio, and rented that Greenwich Village basement "studio apartment" as a springboard to fame and fortune as author and actress, respectively, how were they to know what they were getting into—beyond a place to sleep fitfully a night or two in the glare of a street lamp that peered brazenly through their sidewalk-level window, along with all the derelicts that strolled a squalid street?

Who was there to tell them that the subway was blasting directly beneath their beds, that the back door had no lock, that the plumbing leaked, that their neighbors, the Wreck from Georgia Tech and his "wife," were engaged in an adventurous social experiment; that their landlord entertained slightly demented delusions of grandeur as a great artist, or that the tenant immediately ahead of them had been a Lady Bountiful with an entire airfield on her calling list? Nobody. But they found out!

They found out, also, that a slightly bewitched soda-jerker from Liggett's, a magazine publisher, a newspaper reporter and a considerable "task force" of the Brazilian navy—a pretty predatory crew, to all appearances—can turn out to be exceedingly helpful in certain circumstances.

The only one who never found out how or why innocence can thrive in a wilderness of wickedness was bewildered Papa Sherwood, who came to take the girls back home after it was too late. The Brazilian medal to his younger daughter, a writing job for his elder, the "reconstructed" landlord and the subway sandhog, popping up through the floor at the last minute, were all too much for Papa. It is all almost too much for any audience's capacity for explosive exuberance.

Cast Reveals Improvement

The three acts and four scenes of the convulsive comic valentine, this time around, are interpreted by virtually the same cast seen here on its earlier visit. The four substitutions and one transposition, in a total roster of 25, are well on the side of added impetus and conspicuous improvement.

Betty Furness, in the role of Ruth, continues to give an enormously efficient demonstration of the effectiveness of restraint as a foundation of prodigious fun, and Georgette Leslie, moved up from last year's part of the romantic Mrs. Wade to that of Eileen, contributes an ingenuous, sprightly and wholly disarming study in the lure of youth. Leo Chalzel continues as the apoplectic Mr. Appopolous, King Calder as the misleading Chic Clark and Jean Casto as the widely popular Cleopatra of the pavements.

Russell Hardie brings richer talents to the role of the Wreck than his predecessor and Michael Ellis, King Donovan and Henry Richards do likewise for the characters of Mr. Fletcher, the impressionable Mr. Lippincott and the admirable Robert Baker, respectively. Bijou Fernandez, distinguished actress, lends importance to a role that is relatively minor. Not a member of the company but rings the bell.

It should be welcome news that "My Sister Eileen" again is on E Street for a two-week stay. It is a tonic experience, no less the second time than the first.

Miss Main Bids Landlords Adieu

After 25 years of living in hotels, in apartments and suitcases, Marjorie Main moves into her first home.

It's in Beverly Hills, Calif., a nice, comfortable, cozy bungalow. And Marjorie was so anxious to get into it that she spent her one and only free day from M-G-M's "The Man On America's Conscience" moving into it.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Aug. 17.

Last week the most distinguished guests at the Stork Club were a corporal and a sergeant who had fought in Bataan. They were wounded and were evacuated on the last hospital ship which left there . . . During one of the sea voyages which brought them to America one of the passengers was a Nazi general, captured in Africa. He was given a stateroom as well as a deck chair . . . One afternoon he left his hat on the deck chair, and when he returned the hat was gone. A soldier had taken it, as a souvenir. The general demanded its return . . . It was returned to him only after the captain of the vessel ordered the ship quarantined in port until the trophy was surrendered.

EDDIE CANTOR

For the first time in his long film career, Eddie Cantor will not be starred alone in his new Warner picture. Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart will share the star billing. That movie will have every star on the Warner lot appearing in it—as part of a benefit show scene. . . . The Democratic platform Lieutenant Governor Poletti now is drawing will affirm the faith in Roosevelt, praise Lehman's regime and vow 100 per cent support of the war program . . . Maurice Evans' draft board, which had given him a physical examination, will allow him to accept the commission offered him by the Army Specialists Corps. He was about to be sworn in when the draft call came.

This is a story told by one of Queen Wilhelmina's entourage—of the loyal Dutch couple in Amsterdam, in whose house a Nazi officer was billetted. While the husband went out to seek a job, the officer told the wife: "Give me some dinner" . . . "But I have no food," she informed . . . The officer pointed to the picture of Queen Wilhelmina on the wall and suggested: "Why don't you put a picture of Hitler there? Then you'll get food" . . . That night, when the lady's husband returned he asked for dinner, and she served him large portions of newly acquired vegetables. He then looked up and noticed that the Queen's picture was gone and Hitler's picture substituted. "Who's that?" asked the husband . . . "Oh, that," she answered. "That's our new grocer."

Alan Ladd, the screen's newest gangster-menace, now has no difficulty in getting movie assignments. Every studio is seeking his services . . . Ladd was discovered by Sue Carol, the former screen star who became a Hollywood agent. She met him while he was a propman in the studios, became his agent, and then married him . . . The prospect of collecting 10 per cent of his salary no longer interests her—inasmuch as Ladd prefers that she take care of all his earnings. And so she sold his contract to another agent—for $10,000.

The producers of the new Sam Behrman play, which will star the Lunts, need a Filipino actress who can speak her native language. Because no agent has been able to supply such a girl the producers have interested the Philippine National Bank in getting one for them . . . Jack Bleeck, who owns the famed Artists and Writers Restaurant here, is running Newman's Lake House in Saratoga . . . Two radio sponsors watched Block and Sully's performance on the "Star-Spangled Vaudeville" broadcast . . . George Jessel will recoup his investment in "High Kickers," the musical about burlesque, by the sale of the movie rights to Metro, for $30,000.

During the gay, lush 1920s, the most successful writing team of that decade was DeSylva, Brown & Henderson. Buddy DeSylva, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson wrote a series of musical comedy hits and best-selling songs, which netted them more than a million dollars each. Then they disbanded their publishing and writing team, each to write separately . . . DeSylva now is production head of the Paramount film studios. Lew Brown will produce pictures for the M-G-M studios. And Ray Henderson is being signed as a producer, by RKO.

The town's rarest floor show, in Reuben's, at 4 a. m.: Yehudi Menuhin, who had just learned from Larry Adler how to play the harmonica, blowing hot licks on it, in accompaniment to Paul Draper's impromptu dancing . . . For the first time in Broadway history, a bandleader—Bobby Byrne, who made his reputation playing a swing trombone—is playing the harp, at Loew's State

HEDDA HOPPER

'Cemented' Great and Near-Great

Hollywood, Aug. 17.—It was Sid Grauman, one of our greatest showmen, who thought up the glamour premieres (that so many persons have taken credit for) 'way back in "The Covered Wagon" days, at the old Egyptian Theater, then later at the Chinese. It was he who started the foot and hand prints in the forecourt of that theater and recently added Jack Barrymore's profile. Now he'd like to cement Monty Woolley's beard (so would I—then we'd hear no more about it).

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Sid went to the Klondike during the gold rush. When he returned he and his father built a theater in San Francisco. During the big fire it burned down. They stayed on there, became owners of six more. He sold out, came here to manage our million-dollar theater.

And now he's been signed as technical director for "Hello, Frisco, Hello," with Alice Faye, John Payne and Jack Oakie. And it's about time.

If Hunt Stromberg can persuade her, Claudette Colbert will do a picture a year for him for three years.

Just three years ago George Montgomery crashed the movies and now Darryl Zanuck has torn up his old contract, given him a new one for $1000 a week, so he can live in the manner to which he's become accustomed.

His first real starring role will be in "Down to the Sea in Ships," which was set for Tyrone Power. Tyrone went to the sea for Uncle Sam, so George gets it.

I don't wonder Gregory Ratoff is shouting about Hazel Scott. I saw her at a benefit at Hotel Astor, which Ed Sullivan ran when I was in New York. She's dusky, dynamic, daring, and talented.

Unlike "Tales of Manhattan," where the stars are the thing, "The Commandos Came at Dawn," stresses story, 'cause that's bigger than any star. Paul Munt has gone completely overboard on it. Producer Lester Cowan hopes to have it ready for release before "Edge of Darkness" and "The Moon Is Down." All three have similar plots.

"Commandos" was written by C. S. Forester, of the British Intelligence, from actual facts, with Irwin Shaw doing the script. Sounds like the real thing.

And that's what we need today—reality, not fiction—something that will make us all cheer and want to fight.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

When George Case stole home in Boston the other day, Catcher Bill Conroy took the throw and made no attempt to tag Case. He simply threw the ball back to the pitcher, and the game proceeded. There was no rebuke for Conroy. Case had simply stolen the base by so far that any effort to tag him was useless.

POVICH

On Sunday at Yankee Stadium when the Yankees pit their fastest men against Case in a challenge sprint between games of the Army-Navy Relief Fund benefit doubleheader, only the chumps will believe that Case will lose. The race will be on a straightaway of about 75 yards and, with no corners to turn, it will be a test of sheer speed. That is why Case has been the league's best base stealer for four years—his speed. It has offset some of the niceties of base running that other fast men know to a greater degree than Case.

There is a fellow in the league who could make it close for Case, perhaps, but he isn't with the Yankees. He's Don Gutteridge of the Browns. A few years ago, when Leo Durocher was with the Cardinals, he offered to bet that Gutteridge could outrun Case around the bases or on the straightaway. Durocher was picking a fast man in Gutteridge, but he was trwing to make a bad bet. Case would leave Gutteridge behind over any distance beyond 20 yards.

Case Handicapped as Right Hander

It was supposed until the other day that little Phil Rizzuto would be the man Joe McCarthy would send against Case in the sprint, but now it appears that the Yankees' chief hope will be Charlie Keller. "Rizzuto is one of the fast men of the league, but he's not our fastest," McCarthy told your agent. "He scrambles pretty good but he looks as if he is traveling faster than he really is. Those short legs and short strides he takes give that illusion."

There are men in the league who will go to first base faster than Case on a batted ball, but that is no true test of Case's speed, because he is a right-handed hitter. Case concedes almost two yards to left-handed hitters in the 90-foot dash, but that isn't all, explains Clyde Milan, the Nats' coach who used to be a very rapid man getting to first base himself 20 years ago.

"The left-handed hitter has all the best of it going down to first," recites Milan, "because his swing carries him in that direction. "Case and the other right-handed hitters are as far off balance for a run to first as they can get when they swing through a ball. They're penalized a lot more than the six feet they give away in the batter's box."

Milan relates that when he stole 88 bases to top Ty Cobb's record two Chicago track coaches came to his hotel and declared that they had timed all the fast runners in the league in getting to first base and that his time was best. "I felt pretty complimented about that," says Milan, "but I don't think it was true. I think I did get down there faster than Cobb, but I always felt there was a fellow who could beat me down the line.

Cobb Took Exterminator Strides

"He was Burt Shotton of the Browns, now coaching at Cleveland. Shotton was a streak, and every ball he hit, he hit with the idea of taking off for first. He was a left-handed hitter like myself, but he had a big advantage. I used to swing through a ball and get tangled up a bit before I could take off, but that Shotton never went too far around with his bat, and he could beat anybody out of the batter's box, besides having all that speed."

Pete Marshall, our favorite baseball historian and cuspidor marksman who has been watching big league ball, man and boy, for 55 years, vows that the fastest man he ever saw going to first base was Hans Lobert of the Phillies. "There was only one fellow I ever saw who might go down the line as fast as bow-legged Hans," relates Marshall. "He was a fellow named Smythe, who used to pitch for Detroit. And the Browns had a third baseman named Harry Hines who could fly.

"Back in those days they used to compare everybody to Ty Cobb, and, of course, he could go down that line. Cobb also had the infielders scared to death, and that helped him. He used to take those long strides, like Exterminator. Speaker covered more ground in the outfield than Cobb, but when it came to scooting on the bases, Cobb was way out in front."

For his more modern speedsters on the bases, Marshall said he'd take Sam Rice and then Heinie Manush. "Rice used to beat out more infield hits than any man in the league," he says, "and it was a pleasure to watch him go down the line. He was light footed, and he just glided. Manush was the opposite. He was a big fellow who always wore his uniform sloppy, and he never looked like he was fast, but he could drag a bunt and beat it out like nobody I ever saw except Buddy Myer."

With CONSIDINE

Johnson Vs. Ruth Sunday

New York, Aug. 17.—The pages of baseball history will flutter back to the golden age of the game next Sunday at the Yankee Stadium when the one and only Walter Johnson returns to the mound to pitch to the inimitable George Herman Ruth.

CONSIDINE

This good-natured duel between the greatest pitcher of them all and the greatest slugger who ever lived will be the feature of the stunts to be pulled before and between the charity double-header between the Yanks and Senators. It is Ed Barrow's idea and is in keeping with the vigorous old guy's determination to keep all extra-curricular attractions within the realm of baseball.

When Ruth was approached he was immediately enthusiastic. "I always could hit that big guy," George said with a confidence that may not be shared by Johnson. "I beat him by one run six times, pitching against him, too," George added. As you know, Johnson and Ruth were the greatest righthander and the greatest lefthander in the American League between 1915 and 1920.

Johnson was equally agreeable. He'll loosen up his knee-long right arm at his Germantown, Md., farm this week. By the end of the week he'll be good enough to win 10 games for any club. He'll wear a Washington uniform, of course, and Babe will climb back into his famous Yankee uniform.

They're in Good Shape, Too

Neither will need a shoe-horn. Johnson hasn't put on much weight, for he attends very actively to the running of his farm. Ruth took off a lot of suet before appearing in "Pride of the Yankees" and doesn't weigh much more today than he did when he was playing.

The records the two men left behind them are, of course, well known. But they're still hard to believe. Babe hit 714 home runs during his career, 60 of them in 1927. He hit 50 or more homers in four different seasons; 40 or more in 11 seasons, 30 or more in 13 seasons. He hit 114 during 1927 and 1928. He hit 15 of them in World Series, hit .625 in the 1928 series, called his shot in the 1932 series, won the first All-Star game with a homer, and still holds the World Series pitching record of 29 consecutive scoreless innings.

Johnson labored 21 years with Washington, worked in 802 games. His earned run averages in 1913, 1914 and 1918, for instance, were 1.09, 1.71 and 1.28 and he was in there practically every other day and twice on Sundays. In 1908 he pitched the first three games of a four-game series against the Yanks and won three shutouts. He won 414 games for a team that was a chronic tail-ender except for a few years. He won 113-shutouts, pitched 56 consecutive shutout innings, lost some heart-breaking number of 1-run games, struck out 3497 batters with the fastest ball of them all and single-handedly kept Washington in the majors.

Babe will attempt to hit Johnson's great sidearm offerings into the right field stands at the Stadium. The direction will be old stuff for Babe. He hit hundreds of them out there, but after he left the contractors made certain changes in what once was called Ruthville. On the average it's a slightly longer poke now, but the great man says he can make it—even with Johnson in the box. It'll be a sight the fans won't want to miss.

Just about the toughest job in pro football this year will be that of Mike Getto, new pilot of the Brooklyn grid Dodgers. He's taking the place of Jock Sutherland.

Mike played for Jock at Pittsburgh, played well enough to become a tackle on Pitt's all-time team. After that he was line coach at Kansas for 11 years. When Dr. Sutherland was made coach of the Dodgers a couple of years ago his first step was to add Getto to his staff, and it was at the doctor's suggestion that Dan Topping named Getto as coach when Sutherland resigned to go into the Navy.

He coaches Sutherland's type of football, of course. Like most pro coaches he has lost a lot of talent to Uncle Sam, including Ace Parker. But he'll have an experienced first team, at least, for men like Bruiser Kinard, Perry Schwartz, Pug Manders and Merlyn Condit will be back The rest is up to Mike.

Savold-Musto Postponed Until Friday

Entire Card Is Retained For Stadium

Sudden Deluge Here Of Military Secrets Causes Third Delay Of Heavyweight Fight

Lee Savold and Tony Musto, the heavyweight title contenders who were supposed to meet here last Monday, then last Tuesday and then last night, are now rescheduled for Friday night in a thrice postponed 10-round bout at Griffith Stadium.

Promoter Joe Turner announced the entire card will be carried over, including the semifinal which threatens to take show honors, the eight-rounder between Georgie Parks, the local colored heavy and Mike O'Dowd, the New Yorker.

Musto held a 10-pound weight advantage at yesterday's weigh-in, scaling 202 to 192 for the Des Moines battler, nearly a 2-1 favorite over the rugged Chicagoan.

The fight was first scheduled for Monday, August 10, but the Nats used the park for a postponed double header. Last Tuesday was the first postponement date but Savold contracted a cold and a delay was ordered by D. C. boxing commission doctors.

The now jinxed bout was reset for last night but a late afternoon deluge of weather conditions finally forced Turner to call it again. The military secret formed puddles on the stadium canvas and thwarted a last attempt to go on with the show as the canvas could not be lifted.

The Nats play at home tonight and tomorrow night and have two-day games Thursday, making the park unavailable before Friday night.

Browns Take 5-2 Verdict From Indians

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 17.—The St. Louis Browns clubbed two Cleveland pitchers for 11 hits, including Judnich's two-run homer in the ninth, to triumph, 5 to 2, over the Indians tonight in the finale of their three-game series. Mel Harder, Cleveland's starting pitcher, retired at the end of the sixth after Don Gutterridge's smash hit him on the right ankle, and Al Smith finished.

Johnny Niggeling, notching his eleventh victory against ten losses, yielded seven safeties.

After Cleveland opened the scoring in the first inning with a run on a walk, Jeff Heath's single and a passed ball, the Browns came back in the second to score once on successive singles by Judnich, Junior Stephens and George McQuinn.

The Tribe plated another run in the third on a double by Oris Hockett and Ken Keltner's single, and again the Browns came back in the next frome to knot the score.

St. Louis broke the tie with another tally in the eighth and sewed it up in the final stanza when Judnich got his circuit blow, bringing in Chet Laabs, who had singled, ahead of him.

Ruth, Johnson Meet Again On Diamond

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 17.—Another ranking member of baseball's hall of fame, the great Walter Johnson, is coming out of retirement to pitch to Babe Ruth in a pre-game exhibition at Yankee Stadium next Sunday, when the Yankees and Washington Senators play a double-header for Army and Navy Relief.

Generally regarded as the fastest pitcher the game has seen, the Big Train has agreed to warm up his famous wing and try to fog a few past his old rival, the Bambino, for the benefit of the fans. During the 10 years the two great players faced each other in the American League Ruth banged 10 homers off the Big Train, but he whiffed many a time, too.

Ex-Giant Joins Neyland's Squad

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 17.—Second Lieut. W. R. Nielsen, former University of Arizona and New York Giants fullback, joined Col. Bob Neyland's All-Army football squad here today.

The squad's strength remained at 61 members, however, as Neyland sent First Lieut. Dwight Sloan, former Arkansas tailback, back to Camp Williams, Utah.

The Red and Blue teams fought a 12-12 tie during a pass scrimmage.

A Tough Battle Looms

Redskins Will Have No Picnic Against Army's West Eleven

Wallace Wade's Boys Expected to Give Pros More Than They Bargained for in Big Game

By Robert Myers
Associated Press Sports Writer

Los Angeles, Aug. 17.—A few of the listeners enjoyed a quiet little snicker off in one corner when George Preston Marshall observed in his usual dulcet tones that the Army's West team would prove no setup for Mr. Marshall's Washington Redskin football aggregation.

The eminent spokesman from Washington could easily have been suspected of talking through his hat, because it's a known fact that most All-Star teams have a faculty of looking good on paper and bad on the playing field.

Several days have passed since Mr. Bigwig of the Washington Wigwam donated his prediction, and it is now evident and safe to say that Marshall wasn't talking through his Fedora.

In fact, it appears at this date that the tide has switched and the Marshall comment might be changed to say that Washington's Redskins will prove no set-up for the Wallace Wade-coached Army team when they clash in here Aug. 30.

A Great Array of Talent

The Army, hoping to get off on the right foot in this series of games against National Professional League clubs, seems to have rounded up a terrific array of talent who not only look good on paper but should look better against the Redskins, the Chicago Bears and the other pro rivals.

Material reeks with athletes who were famous in college, but of more importance, Major Wade has men who have played pro ball. Here are a few of the men he has on hand, and you should recognize the names:

Carrasquel Pitches Tonight in Opener Of A's Series Here

Alex Carrasquel, who still owns a four-game winning streak despite the fact he was knocked out of the box in Boston last weekend, will get tonight's pitching assignment for the Nats against the Athletics. The time is 8:30 p. m.

The Nats will be attempting to put the specter of eighth place far behind them in the three-game series with the A's. Tonight's battle will be followed with another nocturnal game tomorrow, and a double-header on Thursday afternoon.

The Nats will be attempting also to put an end to a four-game losing streak incurred at Boston. Manager Bucky Harris announced yesterday that he will make no changes in the line-up which won four games in a row for the Nats at Griffith Stadium last week.

Barna's Single In Ninth Wins For Giants, 3-2

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 17.—With the bases loaded and two men out in the last half of the ninth inning, Babe Barna cracked a single into right field today to give the New York Giants a 3-2 decision over the Boston Braves and increase their winning streak to five games.

The victim of Barna's game-winning blow was Johnny Sain, who replaced Starter Lou Tost after the Giants tied the score in the eighth on Babe Young's seventh homer.

The Braves scored both their runs off Hal Schumacher in the opening frame on singles by Paul Waner, Max West and Eddie Miller. After that, Schumacher held them scoreless on four hits until he gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Mickey Witek started the Giant's ninth inning rally by singling with one out. Ott walked and both runners advanced on a wild pitch. Johnny Mize drew an intentional pass and Young went down on a foul for the second out.

Called to Army, Seeded Net Player Defaults at Match Point

Bill Talbert, Ranked 2d at Brookline, Gives Opponent Life; Greenberg Victorious

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 17.—A Portchester, N. Y. draft board gave the seeded list of the forty-eighth Longwood Bowl Tennis Tournament its first dent at the outset today by ordering 23-year-old William Talbert of Cincinnati, to report immediately.

Talbert, seeded second, defaulted in favor of Robert Smidl when he reached match point against that Chicago youngster. Talbert won the opening set at 6—3 and then retired from the tourney while holding leads of five games to one and a 40—15 in the final set.

Seymour Greenberg of Chicago, ranked third in the draw, eliminated Bud Hart of Miami, 6—3, 6—1, and fourth-seeded Victor Seixas of Philadelphia bested Gardner Larned of Chicago, 6—2, 6—4.

Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, who headed the domestic draw, was unable to reach Longwood today, as were the colorful South American entries, Francisco Segura of Ecuador, and Alejo Russell of Argentina.

Mulloy will get started against Arthur McDonald of Los Angeles tomorrow when Segura opposes Al Everts of Boston, and Russell takes on Art Bundis of Chicago.

Among first-round victors were Hollywood's Falkenberg brothers, Bob and Tom, who provided most of the opening day's excitement by giving lightly regarded opponents plenty of rope before settling down to serious tennis. Bob finally managed to gain a 10—8, 6—3 victory over Richard Odman of Seattle, and Tom kept pace with his brother by disposing of Edward Gilbert of Huntington, N. Y., 11—9, 6—4.

Yanks Aided By 11 Walks; Get 10 Hits

Harris and Knott Pounded Before Rookie Stops N. Y.; DiMaggio Homers

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 17.—Charley (Red) Ruffing, who leads all active major league pitchers in shutouts, blanked the Philadelphia Athletics on eight hits today as the New York Yankees closed out their business here for the season with a 15-0 triumph.

Ruffing's victory, his eleventh of the season against seventh defeats, was the 255th of his career, enabling him to tie Ted Lyons of the Chicago White Sox for the lead in lifetime wins. It was his fourth shutout this year and the forty-second of his career.

The Yankees collected only 10 hits off Luman Harris and Jack Knott and none off Rookie Bob Savage, who worked the last four frames, but they had the help of 3 Philadelphia errors and 11 bases on balls.

DiMaggio Homers

Joe DiMaggio led the attack, driving in three runs with his eleventh triple and his eighteenth homer. The four-bagger came in the fourth with a man on base after Knott had replaced Harris, who yielded five runs on four hits in the first three innings and suffered his eleventh defeat against 10 wins.

Seven of the Yankee runs came in the fifth on five hits and two errors. Joe Gordon came to bat twice in the inning and got both of his hits for the day, a single and a double.

Every Yankee except Ruffing scored at least once. The only Yankees who didn't get a hit were Ruffing, Rollie Hemsley, who caught the last four innings, and Buddy Hassett, who watched a 12-game batting streak come to an end.

No Flag for A's

The Yanks, who compiled their fourteenth shutout, also added three double plays to their season's total, which stands at 154 for 115 games.

Manfuso's Ascertain Scores in Fort Dix Purse at Camden

Favored Legation Runs Third

Uncle Billies Takes Place Spoils; Victor Scores by 3-Quarters Length; Pays $6.20

By the Associated Press

Garden State Park, Camden, N. J., Aug. 17.—John A. Manfuso's Ascertain, a bay son of the once famous Aneroid, left no doubt as to his off track ability when he lasted to score a three-quarter length victory in the five and one-half furlong Fort Dix purse, featuring the Monday program at Garden State Park.

Ascertain, making only the fourth start of his career, reached the wire in front of Uncle Billies, one that had been last in the field and closed with a rush. Legation, carrying the money of the form players in the crowd of 6000, was third in the five-horse affair. Trigger Rose and Dot's Key completed the field. Ascretain paid $6.20.

Legation, a youngster which had started only twice in his career, was made the choice, due to an easy win in the mud here, and was first to show at the start. He lacked the speed he displayed in his winning effort, however, and before they had gone a sixteenth of a mile, both Ascertain and Trigger Rose had gotten to the front of the choice.

Apprentice Willie Gillespie was just coasting while holding a short advantage on the turn and when he asked the juvenile for speed, the colt responded well to open a two-length lead soon after entering the home lane. It looked like he would have everything his own way as his pursuers began tiring, but Jockey Rocco Sisto had moved up from last place with Uncle Billies and was fairly flying while setting sail for the leader.

Ascertain, however, proved his fondness for the heavy going and came home driving in 1:10 2-5. The win, which was the second in four starts for Ascertain, completed a double for Trainer Dion Kerr and Jockey Willie Gillespie.

2d Lieut. Greenberg On Duty at Fort Worth

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 17 (AP).—Second Lieut. Henry (Hank) Greenberg of the Army Air Force arrived today for duty as special service officer with the Flying Training Command.

The former baseball star, who entered the Army as a private in the spring of 1941, received his commission last week.

Marlboro Race Track Opener Set Tomorrow

Eight-Race Program to Be Presented Daily; 400 Thoroughbreds Ready for 100-Day Meet

By the Associated Press

Upper Marlboro, Md., Aug. 17.—The ten-day Marlboro race meeting is scheduled to open Wednesday afternoon with the fiveand one-half furlongs Upper Marlboro Purse for 3-year-olds and up featured.

Eight flat races will make up the daily programs, there being no steeplechase racing at Marlboro, and Race Secretary Eddie Brennan is assured of ample gallopers to fill his daily programs. More than 400 thoroughbreds from the recently concluded Cumberland meeting are expected to be on hand as well as the runners now quartered at Marlboro and the nearby Bowie track.

Minimum purses will be $600 with several special events carrying $800. Fields will be limited to eight starters over the half-mile long oval.

Holders of track records for every distance to be run during the meeting are expected to be on hand. Among them are: Hiblaze, who went five and one-half furlongs in 1.07 4-5; Royal Business, six and one-half furlongs in 1.24 3-5; Tyr, a mile and one-sixteenth in 1.54 2-5; Officiate, a mile and three-sixteenth in 2.08 4-5, and Our Teddy, a mile and five-sixteenths in 2.24 4-5.

Tarheel's Tatum One Coach Who Is Not Singing Blues

Confidently Expects to Improve His Record Of Last Season; Georgia 'Fears' Mississippi

By Romney Wheeler
Associated Press Sports Writer

Atlanta, Aug. 17.—You have to admire the restraint of the University of North Carolina News Bureau . . . Conceding that Coach Jim Tatum is confronted by major problems, the tub-thumpers insist he isn't singing the blues, yet . . . "in fact," they continue, "he's counting on the Tar Heels to win more games than they did last year" . . . Note: Last year N. C. won 3, lost 7 . . . Centre College, where the successor to Quin Decker will have to look for talent with a microscope, "wants out" on its game with George next fall, and the Orange Bowl champs may tear up their contract in favor of a service contest . . . Ground-looping chesty Covington, who changes location faster than a Labor Department conciliator, says he's sorry he couldn't stay in Miami and pitch for the Merrill-Stevens simi-pros, "but I have a good chance to get into the big show next year, so I had to take it." . . . At the moment he has just guaranteed to pitch the Louisville Colonels into the International League playoffs.

MINUTE MEDITATIONS: "The University of Mississippi may have lost most of its players and half of its coaches," says Georgia's coach, Wallace Butts, "but you can count on it, the night they play us they'll have everything."

CUFF STUFF: For a guy who goes out of his way to dig up trouble you can have your choice, but I'll take Raymond Johnson, sports editor of the Nashville Tennesseean . . . Looking dolefully into the future, he notes that reprocessed golf balls are heavier than regulations balls, hence an ace scored with such a ball would technically be illegal . . . "Beanball pitching is reaching serious proportions," says a Charleston headline . . . Yes, and it's one of those things which strike you suddenly . . . Zip Newman, sports editor of the Birmingham News, thinks umpires should be rotated from league to league each year, bringing them back about every third season . . . And this is to suggest that most managers would settle to have certain aggressive parties just keep on going.

SHORT THOUGHT: "From the baseball injuries he's suffered at Camp Wheeler," argues Buddy Atkinson of the Louisville (Ky.) Times, "The Army had better ship Cecil Travis to Australia before he gets killed."

Mixer Takes Seekonk Purse, Paying $7.60

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 17.—S. W. Shapoff's Mixer scored by two and one-half lengths today in the $1500 Seekonk Claiming Purse at Narragansett Park.

Third choice in a field of five, which was rather evenly backed, the 3-year-old son of Canaan covered the six furlongs in 1:13 2-5 over a muddy track.

Closest to him at the finish was Mrs. Yancey Christmas' Rough Time with the Irish-bred Ended, owned by Mrs. Fred Preece, third.

When York River tried to move past Rough Time through the far turn, Mixer came up too and the combination proved too much for York River. Rough Time was snugged on the rail and finished a length and three-quarters ahead of Ended which had barely three lengths on the tiring York River.

Jockey James Now in Service

Saratoga Race Track, N. Y., Aug. 17 (AP).—Word arrived here today that veteran Jockey Basil James, who reported for Army examination and induction at Governor's Island August 14, now is in the service. James, whose home is in Sunnyside, Wash., led all American riders in 1936 and has consistently finished with the leaders in other seasons, especially in the matter of percentage.

James, who failed to pass his examination a year ago, was riding free-lance of late. He has been in the employ of C. V. and J. H. Whitney, W. E. Boeing, Maj. Austin Taylor and other well-known stables during his career.

Labor DayCard At Washington Goes to Relief

By the Associated Press

Homewood, Ill., Aug. 17.—Washington Park will dedicate its traditionally best day, Labor Day, September 7, to the benefit of the Army and Navy Relief Associations and the USO.

The entire net proceeds of the day will be turned over to those three war agencies. Furthermore, an extra race will be run each remaining Saturday of the meeting and on Labor Day. The proceeds from such extra races will be given to local war relief agencies.

In setting aside Labor Day as its major contribution to the war effort, Washington Park is following the example of its associate track, Arlington Park, which donated the proceeds of its July 4 program to Army and Navy relief.

From the Fourth of July program at Arlington Park the Army and Navy relief organizations realised $126,095.50, which is the largest amount yet raised for the war effort by any American race track.

Turfman Joe Kelly Enlists in Army Again

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16 (AP).—Joseph B. Kelly, 43-year-old Elkton, Md., racehorse trainer and veteran of the first World War, enlisted in the Army at the local recruiting station today.

Kelly, who said he thought his "country needs me more than the horses," has served six years in the Army. Kelly trained four horses which were at Fairgo the last weeks.

Golfer, Needing Hole To Win Title, Gets an Ace

New Britain, Conn., Aug. 17 (AP).—Playing on the municipal course in one of the beaten 16s in the city golf championship, Frank Anderson needed to win one more hole to defeat his rival.

He won it—with a hole in one.

Blueberry Pie's Stretch Run Wins Washington Race

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Blueberry Pie, 4-year-old gray colt owned by Mrs. Max Factor, jr., overtook Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Trelawny in the stretch to win the $2000 Hammond Purse at Washington Park today. A ladies' day crowd of 13,000 was present.

Trelawny was beaten a length and a half and was half a length in front of B. B. Robinson's No Competition in the mile and a furlong race.

Trelawny set all the pace, followed by Blueberry Pie and No Competition. The leader failed to stay in the stretch. Blueberry Pie paid $5.20 and the time was 1:50 4-5. Ralph Neves was the rider.

80 Youngsters Brave Weather to Open Post's Grid School

Janowski Presides at Short Drill

100 Grid Students Expected Today At Eastern High; 3 Coaches Visit

By Bill Burnett

With a fine disregard for the weather, which was about as wet as possible, more than 80 hardy young football players turned out yesterday to christen the second edition of The Washington Post's annual football school at Eastern High Stadium.

Rain started falling exactly as students were going out on the field, and only paused briefly throughout the evening. Despite the soaking they received, entries went through a quick period of calisthenics, listened to a discussion of the school's purposes by its head coach, John Jankowski, and assistant "Babe" Ehrlich, and then were excused.

It was a brief inaugural, but highly pleasing to the school's coaches. They visioned a class of over 100 when and if action can be started in earnest today under sunny skies.

Rain or Shine

"We'll have more boys than we can handle," Jankowski said, wiping the rain out of his eyes, "if its decent tomorrow. Many of those who expected to come today probably thought the thing was called off because of the weather. From now on we'll let them know that come what may, the program goes on."

In addition to numerous lads getting their first taste of football and almost as many proven stars from last year, yesterday's get-together produced three unexpected visitors. On hand to "help out if needed" were three additional coaches—George Worthington, former Episcopal High mentor, and Coaches Twomey and Pegler, the latter pair now spending their vacations from Cambridge, Mass., high schools in this city.

All are expected to be available this evening when the second class starts at 6 p. m. for a two-hour stand. With a fervent hope for clear weather, the following regular program will be taken up:

Exercises First

First, there will be a half hour of calisthenics. Then students will be given a breather while Jankowski discusses the various offensive and defensive formations, something he says most boys never quite get straight.

Finally, the class will be called for an hour of instruction in the fundamentals of blocking and tackling. This will be accompanied by demonstrations by Jankowski and Ehrlich, after which individual attention will be given each player as he goes through the motions.

Starting tomorrow the school each day will present guest ceaches, each of whom will talk on a special department of the game.

The first day's program calls for the appearance of "Red" Sweeney, former president of the District of Columbia Football Officials Association, and a discussion of the rules, new and old.

Brownells Slated To Enter Maryland Father-Son Play

Bobby Brownell, for two years the District's top ranking golfer, and his dad, J. V. Brownell, may compete in the Maryland State Golf Association's Father-and-Son tournament Sunday at the Country Club of Maryland. The Brownells are former champions.

Bobby, for three years the District's outstanding amateur golfer prior to his present position which sent him out of town and away from golf, has confined most of his play of late to occasional practice on driving ranges at night. He hopes to get away a day for the tournament.

J. V. Brownell warmed up for the event with a 74 at Manor on Sunday, a round that included only 24 putts as he advanced in the two-man team event.

Fort Washington Adds G. U. to List

Baseball fans at Fort Washington are still boasting about Sunday's 4-2 victory for the camp nine over Georgetown University, champion of the D. C.-Maryland College League. The star of that one was Third Baseman Adrian Smith, who pounded out three hits in four times. Pitcher Hopkins held the Hoyas to six hits.

The 1942 Grid Season Gets a Nudge From The Post

Zuppke Faces Sorting Job With All-Stars

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 17.—Bob Zuppke's "dream position" as coach of the College All-Stars has a drawback.

He doesn't have to spend time teaching fundamentals to 60 of the best college football men in the country—he can swing right into strategies, tactics and umph plays, for which Mr. Zuppke is famous. That's the dream.

Here's the drawback: From all this lush talent, it's rather hard to pluck the best-fitted men for precise assignments and dovetail them into units balanced with power, speed and versatility at every position.

It's something like being an old woman in a shoe with so many children she doesn't know what to do.

In more than a week of practices, Zuppke and his staff have worked on dozens of man power combinations. With August 28, the date the All-Stars tangle with the Chicago Bears at Soldier Field, drawing near, two distinct units have begun to take shape. They undoubtedly will be changed and refitted before the game and be ready to take the field after the starting eleven, selected in a Nation-wide poll, has been tested.

These teams have appeared most effective in scrimmages:

1. Ends—Henry Stanton, Arizona, and John Kovatch, Notre Dame; tackles—Urban Odson, Minnesota, and Paul Lillis, Notre Dame; guards—Len Levy, Minnesota, and Bernie Crimmins, Notre Dame; center—Vic Lindskog, Stanford; quarterback—Lloyd Cheatham, Alabama Poly; halfbacks—Bill Dudley, Virginia, and Steve Juzwik, of Notre Dame, with Jack Jacobs, Oklahoma, alternating; fullback—Bob Westfall, Michigan.

2. Ends—Ray Elbi, Notre Dame, and Judd Ringer, Minnesota; tackles—Jim Daniell, Ohio State, and Al Blozis, Georgetown; guards—Bob Jeffries, Missouri, and George Abel, Nebraska; center—Bob Ingalls, Michigan; quarterback—Dick Erdlitz, Northwestern; halfbacks—Bruce Smith, Minnesota, and Pete Kmetovic, Stanford, with Bob Moser, Texas Aggies, alternating; fullback—Bob Sweiger, Minnesota.

Eight of the chosen starters are included in these two temporary units—Erdlitz, Smith, Ringer, Blozis, Jeffries, Daniell Crimmins and Juzwik.

Jenkins Retires At West Point; 1893-98 Mat Champ

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Retirement of Tom Jenkins, former world wrestling champion and Army wrestling coach, as physical education instructor at the United States Military Academy after 37 years of service, was announced today, effective at the end of August.

John Kress of Rochester, N. Y., a physical education instructor since 1928, will succeed Jenkins.

Jenkins, 70 years old, won the world wrestling title in 1893 by pinning Farmer Burns in straight falls. He held the title until 1898, when he was defeated by Youssef the Terrible at Madison Square Garden.

Cards Rally, Defeat Reds Again, 5 to 2

By International News Service

St. Louis, Aug. 17.—The St. Louis Cardinals trimmed another half game from the lead of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers today when a seventh-inning rally gave them a 5-to-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. It was the Birds' third straight victory over the Red Legs.

A double, a triple and a single in that order after two were out paved the way to the Card triumph that pared Brooklyn's lead to 7½ games in the reviving National League race.

Howie Krist was nicked for 10 hits by the Red Legs, but spaced them well enough to last the distance and chalk up his tenth victory of the season. The hurler singled home Johnny Hopp in the seventh to put the game on ice after Martin Marion doubled and scored on Hopp's triple.

Williams and Reiser Retain Major League Bat Leads

Brooklyn Star Fades to .336 but Beats Out Lombardi

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 17.—Pete Reiser's hold on the National League batting leadership remains virtually as strong as ever from week to week, particularly because his closest pursuers slump when he slumps.

The Brooklyn outfielder, who returned to action a week ago after a brief injury layoff, lost six points off his batting average during the past week and dropped to .336.

At the same time, however, Boston's Ernie Lombardi dropped from .329 to .325 while retaining second place. Lombardi, whose average of two weeks ago would have tied him for the lead today, held his position ahead of third-place Joe Medwick of the Dodgers because Medwick dropped from .326 to .323.

There were no changes in position among the first five batters in the league's "top 10" regulars who have appeared at the plate 225 times or more, although all five of them watched their averages decrease.

W. Cooper Jumps

The week's most notable performance was that of Walker Cooper, the St. Louis Cardinal catcher, who raised his average from .292 to .308 and jumped from tenth place to seventh.

Lou Novikoff of Chicago, who continued in sixth place, added two points to his average, bringing it to .313 for a total increase of 13 points in three weeks.

Following the first three men, those in the top ten through Sunday's games were: Stan Musial, St. Louis, .316; Enos Slaughter, St. Louis, .314; Novikoff, Chicago, .313; Cooper, St. Louis, .308; Elbie Fletcher, Pittsburgh, .300; Johnny Mize, New York, .299, and Stan Hack, Chicago, .296.

Dolph Camilli of Brooklyn took over the home run leadership with 20, one more than Mel Ott and Johnny Mize of the New York Giants.

Medwick, who drove in four runs during the week, topped that department with 79, while Ott continued to lead in the number of runs scored with 84.

Slaughter replaced Medwick as the leader in total hits with 139, three more than the Dodger outfielder, and continued to lead in triples with 16. Medwick shared the lead in doubles with Hack, each with 30, while Reiser's 13 stolen bases were tops in that department.

Larry French and Whitlow Wyatt of the Dodgers continued to pace the circuit's pitchers. French registered two victories during the week to bring his record to 13 wins and only one loss. Wyatt's one triumph brought his record to 14 and four.

A. L. Champ Ups Average to .352; Gordon in Slump

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Ted Williams won the 1941 American League batting crown with a .406 mark but this year that figure has been as far away as the moon.

After the Boston Red Sox outfielder rose to the top of the batting list for the first time in early July, he hovered around the .340s, some 60 points off his winning 1941 average. He hit .352 three weeks ago, only to fall off again.

Well, Ted is up at .352 again by climbing 11 points in the week of play through Sunday's games. His nemesis of a week ago, the New York Yankees' Joe Gordon, slumped four points and now there are 16 percentage figures separating the leading Williams from his nearest pursuer.

Taft Wright of the Chicago White Sox muffed a big chance to overtake Gordon when his average fell seven points, and he managed to hold third place with a .331 average, just one point better than Stan Spence of Washington.

Trailing along were John Pesky of Boston at .319, Bobby Doerr of Boston at .317, George Case of Washington at .316, Vern Stephens of St. Louis and Joe DiMaggio of the Yanks tied at .309 and Les Fleming of Cleveland at .301.

Ted's monopoly on three specialty departments continued as he ran his leading total of runs batted in to 106, home runs to 25 and runs scored to 100. Pinky Higgins of Detroit had the most doubles, 33, and Jeff Heath of Cleveland and Spence were tied in triples with 12 each. Case stole one base in the week to run his total to 27.

Hank Borowy of the Yankees was restored to the pitching lead as last week's two front men, Spud Chandler of the Yanks and George Caster of St. Louis, each suffered another loss. Borowy's mark is 11 wins and 2 defeats. Tex Hughson of Boston had a 15 and 3 mark, Chandler 13 and 3 and Ernie Bonham of New York 14 and 4 to pace the field.

Lewis-Wright Team Wins Pin Match

Washington's fastest-stepping mixed doubles duckpinners, Madge Lewis and Al Wright, chalked up another triumph yesterday, this time over No. 3 ranking Lucille Young and Julie Singer. Final scores were 1207 to 1189.

Mrs. Lewis found the Greenway drives to her liking and maintained her 120 average for special events with a 598 total, 35 pins more than Mrs. Young. Wright, however, had but 609 to Manager Singer's 626. Mrs. Lewis' 129 total in the fifth game turned the tide and put the match in the win column, the duo's ninth in 13 starts. This Wednesday night the two will take on Lois Gladding and Karl Gochenour at Clarendon.

NEW RECREATION

The Census Bureau-Population Section mixed league at New Recreation found that Miss Gardner, Commandos, had top totals for the women with her 113 single and 304 set, while Williams, Skeeters, led the men after counts of 118-340. The Skeeters won a pair from the Yanks to cut the latter's first-place lead.

BETHESDA

Rolling on their home alleys, the Bethesda Bowling Center match team won over Clarendon by the score of 1842 to 1763. Frank Riley's fine 145-415 and R. L. Willis' 390 sparked the win despite a 150 single and 402 set by Al Wright and a 370 set by Billy Stalcup. Willis, Bill King, Riley and Al Cissel alternated in the doubles engagement to no avail and could score but 689 to 807 for the Stalcup-Wright duo, the former getting 168-427. King, however, had 152-395 to win handily over Stalcup by 27 sticks.

ARLINGTON

Ruth McClintic and Nick Rinaldi totaled 1195 to win a special match at Arlington Bowling Center over Lil Copeland and Paul James with the latter couple 20 pins down. Rinaldi's 149-657 topped James by 64 pins, while Mrs. Copeland's 577 set was 39 sticks more than Mrs. McClintic could count. A return match will be held this Friday night at Brookland Recreation.

HYATTSVILLE

An invading quintet of all-star Baltimore duckpinners rolled a special match at Hyattsville Recreation and dropped the team match to Oscar Hiser's charges by an 1862 to 1837 total. Harry Hilliard's 166-408, Jimmy tt's 397 and Perce Wolfe's 380 led for the winners with Art Felter's 158-401, Nova Hamilton's 382 and Nick Paye's 379 topping the visitors. Howard Parsons and Lou Pohl scored 793 to whip the Hilliard-Remsburg duo in handy fashion, but Tony Santini and Wolfe counted 786 to win over Hamilton and Paye. Jimmy Ott lost to Libertini by 49 sticks with the winner shooting 392.

LaChappelle Back On Mat Program Tomorrow Night

Although he failed last week in teaming with Ace Freeman in their two-man bout against Michele Leone and Jim Austeri, Maurice LaChapelle will return to singles competition or further honors tomorrow night at Turner's Arena.

LaChappelle has been matched against John Vanski, the blond Russian, and the Frenchman will attempt to keep his streak of singles victories unbroken.

The headliners are Ernie and Rudy Dusek, who will face Leone and Austeri in two out of three falls. The semiwindup is between Paul Boesch, Long Beach, Long Island, Adonis, and Tommy O'Toole, of the United States Coast Guard while in the opening battle Johnny Long, Texas, will scrap with Eddie King.

Tigers Defeat Muskegon Stars

Muskegon, Mich., Aug. 17 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers took a Busman's holiday today and taught the youngsters of the Muskegon Tri-Cities League a baseball lesson by walloping an All-Star team, 16 to 1, in an exhibition game before 4500.

Four home runs rattled off the Detroit bats—one by Rookie Catcher Harry Riebe with two on base, two by Outfielder Don Ross, and one by Rudy York with two aboard—as five Muskegon hurlers were nicked for 15 hits.

Pro-Am Play At Lancaster Is Postponed

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 17.—Flooded fairways and water-covered greens forced a postponement of the annual pro-amateur tournament here today at Lancaster Country Club after nearly 75 teams had made the trip from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and nearby Pennsylvania points.

Sixteen duos played morning rounds, including Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree Club pro in Washington, and Dick Melvin of Kenwood, who reported a 70. All scores were voided by the weather, however.

The 18-hole pro-one partner event has been rescheduled for Monday, August 31.

Host Pro Arthur Thorn, formerly of Washington, waited until 4 p. m. to make the postponement definite. At that time the course was in no condition for golf.

Eight teams from Washington were on hand.

Photo, Printer Nines to Meet On Thursday

Today's scheduled playoff game for the Departmental League title between Naiman Photo and Union Printers has been rescheduled for Thursday on the Ellipse, Vic Gauzza, president of the league, announced last night.

The first two games in the best two-out-of-three series were scheduled yesterday and today but weather conditions postponed the opener and Gauzza then moved the series to new consecutive dates.

All games will be played on the Ellipse.

A third game, if necessary, will be played next week. Naiman won the first-half title and the Printers annexed the second-half crown last week.

Tommy Henrich's Coast Guard Call Faces Short Delay

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 17.—Tommy Henrich took his Coast Guard physical examination today, but it will be at least several days before the New York Yankees' outfielder is sworn in as a first class petty officer.

Attaches at Coast Guard headquarters here said some matters must be ironed out with Henrick's Massillon (Ohio) draft board, which recently classified him 1-A and told the baseball star to return in a few days. Henrich came here after the Yanks' victory last night over the Athletics at Philadelphia. He is 26 and was maried after the first Selective Service registration.

In Philadelphia, where the Yankees played the Athletics today, Mark Roth, secretary of the World Champions, announced that Outfielder George (Tuck) Stainback had been recalled from the club's Newark (N. J.) farm to replace Henrich. Stainback, veteran of former big league service with the Chicago Cubs, Philadelphia Phillies and Brooklyn Dodgers, will report to the Yanks in Boston tomorrow.

Two Amateurs Share Medal At Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, Don Armstrong of Aurora, Ill., and Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., traversed the Knollwood golf course today in 71, two under par, to share medalist honors of the Chicago National Amateur tournament.

The muscular Stranahan, Ohio State champion and a top amateur finished in many of the season's tournaments, posted even par 36 on the front nine and clipped two strokes from regulation figures for a 35 coming in.

Armstrong, former Illinois State and District champion and a National semi-finalist in 1934, had a 35-36. Wehrle, former Western amateur king, and like Armstrong, a former district winner and national semi-finalist, carded a 34-37.

Following the leading trio at the end of the 18-hole qualifying round with scores of 72 were Mike Bencriscutto, 21-year-old Racine star; John Holmstrom, of Rockfold, Ill.; comedalist and semifinalist in the recent all-American amateur at Tam o' Shanter and Steve Kovach, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a quarterfinalist in the last U. S. G. A. amateur tournament.

Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who won the Great Lakes amateur meet last year by beating Stranahan, registered a par 73.

Six golfers were required to playoff for four qualifying berths after being bunched at 82.

Sunday a New Star Was Born

Detroit's Rookie Shortstop Hailed As Kid Sensation

Work in One Game Shows He's Natural Major League Player

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 17.—Johnny Lipon, 19-year-old Detroit youngster, has played only one major league baseball game, but already the critics are calling the date of that one game—Sunday, August 16, 1942—"the day a star was born."

Manager Del Baker of the Detroit Tigers smiled as he walked to the dressing room after Sunday's tag end of a double-header against the Chicago White Sox in which Lipon made his major league debut, and remarked that the Tiger shortstop job is his until somebody takes it away from him.

There was hardly anyone who would say "wait a year or so" about the kid from the Detroit sand lots, who fielded faultlessly in six chances Sunday, two of them little short of sensational. He got three singles in four trips to the plate, driving in one run.

The sports writers took a long range view.

"It was not just what he did," said H. G. Salsinger, sports editor of the Detroit News. "It was the way he did it that stamped him as a natural ball player. If ever a fellow had a right to be nervous, he did, but he fielded and batted as if he had been around for years."

Lipon is the third Detroit youngster to win a regular position with the Tigers. Barney McCosky, in left field, and Hal Newhouser, best of Detroit's southpaw pitchers, also graduated from the Detroit sandlots.

Lipon started in organized baseball with the Detroit Tiger farm at Muskegon in the Michigan State League last season, and played this season with Beaumont in the Texas League.

He is a shy youngster despite his cock-sureness. He is shy despite his aggressivenes. He has a wisp of a grin when he trots in from the field, confident of himself, but unboastful.

Older heads on the Tiger squad grinned knowingly as they patted him on the back yesterday and, apparently as one, accepted the kid as one of them.

He is built like a sprint runner, and handles himself with the ease and grace of a dancer, as witness his two sensational plays Sunday. In the first he went from deep short to beyond second base, scooped up the slow roller from Luke Appling's bat while on a dead run and threw him out in one motion.

In the other he was the pivot man of a double play, taking Pitcher Hal White's throw, stepping on second to retire George Dickey and throwing to first to get Leo Wells, all in what appeared to be in one motion.

Private Debts Paid Off at Record Rate

John Citizen is paying off his personal debts at a record rate so far in 1942 and American borrowing habits are being kicked all around by wartime conditions, says the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., in a survey released here yesterday.

Repayment of money borrowed by its policyholders was at a record high rate for the first seven months of 1942, the company states, running 18 per cent greater than repayments madein the corresponding period of 1941.

At the same time, however, total number of individual loans increased sharply, reflecting many new and smaller loans, for a whole list of new purposes, entirely different from the general run of loan objectives in previous years. This volume of smaller loans reduced the size of the average individual loan in force from $332 as of July 31, 1941, to $301 as of July 31, 1942, the company's report said.

New Style of Loans

New loans are being made to finance the moving of families to war industry areas where the breadwinner has taken a defense job. Others are being made in order to bring charge accounts up to date by the 10th of the month and prevent their suspension. Young women borrow to finance trips to see their sweethearts in the armed forces. Increased living costs and taxes are responsible for other loans, to people who have not benefited by so-called "war prosperity."

Department stores and personal loan institutions reflect the new trends in consumer credit brought about by wartime conditions, the report comments.

"Department stores generally experienced the largest open account credit collections in their history in the first 10 days of July, when Government regulations went into effect requiring suspension of delinquent accounts," the survey noted. "Many old charge customers quit using their accounts temporarily by suspending all buying until they could pay up their accounts. However, opening up of new accounts by defense workers and other beneficiaries of the war program and cash sales caused a less-than-seasonal decline in department store sales generally.

Record Payoffs

"Personal loan departments of many banks report sharply lower total volumes of outstanding loans, following record payoffs. Automobiles and household equipment such as refrigerators, oil burners, etc., are fast fading out of the picture as producers of new loans.

"Young men formerly made up a large proportion of personal loan customers because of their impatience to possess things that struck their fancy. Millions of these potential borrowers are now in the armed forces or are expecting to be called.

"Defense workers make up an increasing proportion of small-loan customers. Many were previously unemployed, but with excellent current incomes now borrow to secure household equipment and other possessions before these disappear from the market. Others borrow to pay off old debts and forestall garnishment or attachment of their new salary checks. As always, a substantial proportion of personal loans are made to pay up medical bills and hospital bills."

Stocks Continue Rally in Quiet Trading; Rail Issues Buoyed by Earnings Reports

New York, Aug. 17.—Buying of rails and selected industrials today aided the stock market to add another tally to its recovery score. Transportation issues were spurred by exceptionally good income reports from Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line and others. Investment bidding for industrial stocks with good profits prospects also was a factor in the day's swing. Hopefulness over the battle of the Solomons continued as a mild bullish stimulant although offset to some extent by the persistent Russian crisis. Disclosure of lengthy conferences between Churchill and Stalin at Moscow were viewed constructively marketwise.

The list inclined to edge at the start and, at the best, gains ran to a point or more for favorites. Prices were reduced here and there at the close and dealings dwindled after midday. New highs for the past year or longer were numerous.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .2 of a point at 36.8. This represented a comeback from the year's low to date of 32 established in April. The high was 38.7 in January. Transfers totaled 293,810 shares, compared with 379,580 last Friday.

Santa Fe, up ⅝ at 44, touched its peak level since 1938. Top marks for the present year also were posted for Erie certificates, Atlantic Coast Line, U. S. Rubber common and preferred, Willys-Overland preferred, Socony-Vacuum, Lehigh Valley Coal preferred, National Dairy, United Air Lines, Pan American Airways, Hiram Walker, Borden and Columbia Pictures.

Others in front included American Telephone, Sears Roebuck, Anaconda, Caterpillar Tractor, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak and Union Carbide.

Homestake Mining extended its last week's loss by 1⅝. U. S. Steel was off ¾ and Bethlehem unchanged. General Motors was up ⅛ and Chrysler down ¼. Laggards were Western Union, du Pont, American Smelting and Liggett & Myers "B."

Carrier loans attracted the principal demand in the bond department. Grains slipped. At Chicago wheat was off ⅝ to 1 cent a bushel, corn down ⅝ to 1⅜ and hogs relatively steady. Cotton came back at the last and finished unchanged to up 5 cents a bale.

In the Curb, Aluminum of America gained 2¼ points on a few trades and Mead Johnson was up 4½ on a meager turnover. Modest improvement was exhibitetd by Gulf Oil, Humble Oil and Tampa Electric. The aggregate here was 46,400 shares versus 51,850 in the preceding full session.

Insurance Sales Drop 6% in July

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—New life insurance written in July amounted to $620,728,000, a decrease of 6 per cent from $660,125,000 in the comparable month of 1941, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents reported today. The figures were based on returns from 39 companies doing most of the life insurance business in the Unitetd States.

For the first seven months new business written totaled $4,731,791,000, an increase of 6.7 per cent over $4,433,291,000 in that period of 1941.

North American Plans Dividend in Stock

Philadelphia, Aug. 17 (AP).—The North American Co. filed with the securities and exchange commission today a proposal to distribute as a dividend an aggregate of $4,100,000 of Detroit Edison Co. capital stock.

The dividend, similar to previous payments, is a further step in compliance with an SEC order directing North American to dispose of its interest in Detroit Edison.

The distribution rate will be one share of Detroit Edison stock on each 50 shares of North American common. No certificates will be issued for fraction shares, but cash will be paid at a rate of one-fiftieth of a Detroit Edison share.

DuPont Votes Dividend

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—E. I. du Pont de Nemour & Co. directors declared today an interim dividend of $1 a common share, payable September 14 to holders of record August 24. Previous payments this year were $1 on June 13 and $1.25 on March 14. On September last year $1.75 was paid.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—Continuing the decline which has been under way with few interruptions since late in July, corn prices today fell more than a cent a bushel to new lows for the season. Other grains sagged sympathetically.

September corn led the downturn, slipping to a low of 83½, or more than 7 cents below quotations prevailing when Congress finally approved the Government's plan to sell surplus wheat for feed at prices equivalent to about 85 per cent of corn parity. This was the lowest price quoted for any corn future here since late in April, when May, 1942, delivery contracts touched 82¾.

Grain brokers blamed much of the weakness on liquidation of September delivery contracts, of which there are more outstanding than for any other option in the futures market. Selling also was attributed to talk concerning possible livestock price ceilings, continued favorable crop weather and conditions and offerings of Government feed wheat.

Factory Wages Set All-Time June Record

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Hourly and weekly earnings and payrolls surpassed all previous records in June, the monthly survey of 25 manufacturing industries regularly covered by the National Industrial Conference Board disclosed today.

The average weekly earnings of all wage workers in the 25 industries rose 1.4 per cent over May to $39.53. This figure was 15.4 per cent above June, 1941, and 38.5 per cent higher than the 1929 average.

Weekly earnings were not only the highest in terms of dollars and cents, but also were at a new peak when measured in the amounts of goods and services these earnings would purchase, the board said.

Adjusting dollar earnings for changes in living costs, the board found "real" wagese up 1.3 per cent in June compared with May, due to the fact that weekly earnings advanced and the cost of living remained unchanged. The June level was 5 per cent higher than on that month last year, and 42.4 per cent above the 1929 average.

[Workers in manufacturing industries earned an average of 84 cents an hour in June, a gain of 1.1 per cent over the preceding month and 13.7 per cent over June of last year, Secretary of Labor Perkins reported yesterday.

[The weekly pay envelope of workers in all manufacturing industries averaged $37.99. This represented a gain of 1.3 per cent over May and 19.4 per cent over June of last year, reflecting the gains in average weekly hours and hourly earnings, Miss Perkins reported.

[The average hours worked per week were 42.6 for all manufacturing, a gain of 3.7 per cent over the year.]

Steel Output Rate To Climb to 97.2%

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Nation's steel industry will operate this week at 97.2 per cent of capacity with an indicated production of 1,662,800 tons, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

Last week's estimated operations were 96.5 per cent with production of 1,650,800 tons of steel. A month ago the rate was 98 per cent and output 1,676,500 tons and a year ago 96.2 per cent with output at 1,589,500 tons.

SEC Denies Review In United Corp. Case

Philadelphia, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission today denied a plea by the United Corporation for a reopening of proceedings against the big holding company under the geographical integration and corporate simplification provisions of the holding company act.

At the same time, the commission extended until September 19 the time for the corporation to file briefs in the case.

with Glynn

In an article entitled "Philosopher At Work" in the current Saturday Evening Post, Writer Jack Alexander draws an interesting word picture of Washington's own Kate Smith, the singing star you've been hearing over WJSV and the Columbia network for the past ten years.

The article traces the career of radio's "First Lady of Song"—from musical comedy performer to radio stardom where, Alexander estimates, she now has a mere 75 million listeners a week.

The work of Ted Collins, Kate Smith's producer-manager, in helping her develop her talents is also brought out for readers of the article. It tells how Collins discovered Miss Smith and helped her become the "girl America loves."

With painstaking detail, Alexander outlines a typical day in the life of Kate Smith, showing readers how she prepares for her noon broadcasts and her Friday evening program; how she spends her spare time.

The article closes with a hitherto unknown anecdote about Kate.

"Once after she had performed with the Philadelphia Orchestra," Alexander writes, "Leopold Stokowski, the conductor, got her off privately with only a few hundred studio spectators around, and placing a paternal hand on her shoulder said throatily, 'Don't let anyone change the voice that God gave you. Its loss would be a tragedy to the world.'"

Kate has it.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are sitting South at a six-spade contract and West opens the diamond jack. Carry on from this point so as to make six-odd. The solution is presented below.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable

SOUTH DEALER

♠ K J 9 7
♣ Q 9 2

♠ 6 5 4 3 — ♡ J 9 5 4 — ◇ J 10 9 7 — ♣ 3

♠ 2 — ♡ K 10 8 6 — ◇ 8 4 3 2 — ♣ K 10 8

♠ A Q 10 8
◇ A K Q
♣ A 7 6 5 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: J ◇.

Declarer makes the small slam by developing a cross-ruff. After winning the diamond opening in the closed hand, he sees that one method is to draw trumps and risk his contract on the location of the club king. As the success of this maneuver is only a 50-50 chance, South decides to try another method which will work if the adverse diamonds are not divided worse than 5-3.

He cashes his two remaining diamonds, discarding a club from dummy, and then leads the singleton heart to North's ace. The club ace is cashed by a small club lead from the board, and a second club is won by East.

Each shifts to a trump, but declarer's contract is now safe, as he can take the remaining tricks by ruffing three clubs in dummy and three hearts in the closed hand. He gives up only a club trick.

Cantaloupes Damaged By Excessive Rains

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boonsboro, Md., Aug. 17.—The rainy weather has played havoc with the flavor of the "Boonsboro" cantaloupes, a distinctive variety which have started ripening. Growers say that this variety, grown only in the unusual soil o be found here, needs dry weather and plenty of sunshine to develop that degree of sweetness that makes them so delectable. They are hopeful that the second crop, due to ripen later in the fall, will get dry weather.

The Post Radio Highlights

10:30 p. m., WJSV—Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the National Woman's Party, will be a guest of Elinor Lee's program when she speaks on the Equal Rights Amendment.

1:45 p. m., WMAL—The United States Army Band in 30 minutes of spirited music direct from the Army War College.

4:30 p. m., WOL—The $5000 Whitney Handicap is broadcast by Bryan Field from the Saratoga track.

7:30 p. m., WMAL—The Dream House cast, Ray Michael, Elwood Gary, Lynne Allison, Morgan Beatty, and Moe Baer's Orchestra salute Georgetown University, which has sent her sons to every American war since the Revolution. Direct from the Georgetown campus.

8:30 p. m., WJSV—Dave Elman brings to the microphone a woman who has been collecting bonnets as a hobby—not that that sounds very unusual, to tell the truth—as one of his many guests with unusual hobbies on "Hobby Lobby."

9:00 p. m., WRC—Battle of the Sexes. Three pursuit pilots will compete with three girl information coordinators on this popular quiz show with Walter O'Keefe as master of ceremonies.

10:30 p. m., WJSV—Dr. Lin Yutang, celebrated Chinese author, lecturer and philosopher, discusses the Indian crisis.

DONALD DUCK — BY WALT DISNEY

A Hot Tip!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Beaut Recruit — BY MILTON CANIFF

I HEARD ABOUT YOUR LIEUTENANT'S RANK COMING THROUGH, MISS TUCKER!
UHHUH! I'M A SOJER NOW, MRS. SANDHURST ...AND I'M MOVING OUT —TOOT SWEET!
WHICH REMINDS ME...YOU AND LITTLE MERRILY WILL BE ON YOUR OWN SOON!
YES...I'VE BEEN WONDERING ABOUT THAT...I'VE BEEN WATCHING YOU TRAIN THE CHINESE NURSES...
YES... ...WOULD IT SEEM FORWARD OF ME TO SUGGEST THAT I STAY HERE AS A VOLUNTEER—TO HELP IN THE HOSPITAL?

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

I WAS JUST WONDERING, DAN, WHY YOU'RE PRETENDING TO PAINT THAT PICTURE FROM AUNTIE'S LIVING ROOM WINDOW!
WHY..! WHAT MAKES YOU SAY THAT?
I'VE NOTICED THAT EVERY NIGHT YOU RUB OUT MOST OF WHAT YOU'VE DONE ALL DAY!..I HAVE EYES, MY SLY FRIEND!
I'LL SAY YOU HAVE EYES, MY ADORABLE CRITIC! AND PERHAPS THEY ARE PART OF THE REASON IT'S GOING TO TAKE ME ALL SUMMER ON THAT CHORE!

MICKEY FINN — Found! — BY LANK LEONARD

MR. AND MRS. — A Fascinating Outdoor Game — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

WHY OBJECT TO MY GOING WITHOUT STOCKINGS? YOU'D HAVE TO GUESS WHETHER THAT GIRL HAD THEM ON OR NOT
I GUESS SHE HAS—OR MAYBE SHE HASN'T EITHER

Miss Wade's Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Miss Margaret Wade, 82, former Washington Post society editor, will be held tomorrow in Elizabethtown, Pa. Miss Wade died Sunday at the home of her sister, Miss Lydia Wade, in Otisville, N. Y. Burial will be in the family plot in Elizabethtown.

Born in Elizabethtown of pioneer stock, Miss Wade joined the Washington bureau of the old Philadelphia Press at an early age. Her unique handling of social life in the Capital and the exclusive contacts that she developed soon attracted attention from the New York Times and led to her appointment as that paper's Washington representative, an association that extended for more than 40 years.

Shortly after she joined the New York Times' bureau, Miss Wade was made society editor of The Washington Post, serving in the joint capacity for many years. For a time she was society editor of the old Washington Herald, before the paper was moved to its present site.

An established authority on Washington protocol, Miss Wade was in great demand from newcomers to the Capital's official circles, and during her crowded life found time to serve as social secretary for the wife of Charles Fairbanks, vice president under Theodore Roosevelt; Mrs. Warren G. Harding, and the wife of the late Senator James Couzens of Michigan.

Between times she syndicated a widely read Washington fashion column, contributed to smart magazines of the time, and authored a comprehensive book entitled "Social Usage in America."

Although she retired from active work a number of years ago, Miss Wade maintained an active interest in the social life of Washington. Her knowledge of activities extending over the Presidential inaugural balls was seemingly inexhaustive, and many present day social writers would call upon her to supply information unobtainable elsewhere.

Up until her death, Miss Wade maintained membership in the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington.

Besides Miss Lydia Wade, she is survived by two other sisters, Miss Katherine Wade of Otisville and Miss Mary Wade of Atlantic City, N. J.

Tuzer, Noted Turk, Dies of Stroke

Ankara, Aug. 17 (AP).—Dr. Ahmet Fikri Tuzer, Turkish Minister of the Interior for the past four months, died today of apoplexy.

Tuzer, who was named to the cabinet by the late Premier Reyfik Saydam, served for a brief time as acting premier following the latter's death last month. He previously had served in the Ministry of Public Health and as secretary general of the People's Party.

Truck Overturns in Collision With Streetcar

THE GASOLINE WENT DOWN THE SEWER—An unloaded trailer-truck was overturned yesterday in a collision with a streetcar at Fourteenth and Corcoran Streets Northwest. Four car passengers, the truck driver and his helper and the streetcar motorman were injured, none seriously. Gasoline spilled from the truck was sluiced down the sewer to prevent a fire

Seven persons were injured in a collision between a trailer-truck and a Capital Transit streetcar shortly before noon yesterday at Fourteenth and Corcoran Streets Northwest. The truck was overturned.

None of the injured was hurt seriously enough to be admitted to hospitals, but the flow of traffic was impeded for nearly an hour before the truck could be righted and the trolley car towed from the scene of the crash. The front of the streetcar was so badly damaged that officials of the company feared to move it under its own power.

According to Privates G. W. Tenley and M. S. McCarthy of the Accident Investigation Unit, the truck, owned by a Baltimore concern, was turning left into Fourteenth Street when struck in the side by the streetcar, which was northbound.

The officers said that the streetcar's motorman, Knox L. Kerley, 25, of 3007 Thirteenth Street Northwest, had been operating a streetcar for three weeks. They added that Kerley will be given a hearing in Police Court Friday morning to determine whether he was to blame for the collision.

Kerley sustained a cut hand in the accident, for which he was treated at Garfield Hospital. The truck driver, Roscoe Wilkes, and his companion, William Newman, Negroes, of Baltimore, both refused to be admitted to Freedman's Hospital, although Wilkes suffered a possible fracture of the left arm, police reported.

Released after treatment at Emergency Hospital were Gertrude Tigney, 21, of 4727 Reno Road Northwest; Mildred Tigney, 18, of 1328 V Street Northwest, and Delilah Harston, 58, of 1319 Corcoran Street Northwest, all Negroes, who were passengers in the streetcar. A fourth passenger, Mary E. Jackson, 70, Negro, of 561 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest, refused treatment for a slight cut on her face.

Three other persons were admitted to District hospitals yesterday after being injured in traffic accidents. Adeline Williams, 36, of 629 Keefer Place Northwest, was struck by a car police said was driven by Frank Harlee, 24, Negro, of 1216 B Street Northeast. She was at Garfield Hospital with a badly sprained left ankle.

Macon E. Gooch, 26, of 4921 First Street Southwest, suffered a knee injury and cuts over the right eye when his car collided with a truck at South Capitol Street and Nichols Avenue Southwest. Police said the truck was driven by Samuel Cook, 45, Negro, of 232 Fifty-eighth Street Northeast.

Dr. Truett's Funeral Rites

Services for Dr. Robert Finley Truett, practicing dentist in Washington for more than a quarter of a century, who died Sunday at his home in Capitol Heights, will be held by Pettit Camp of the United Spanish War Veterans today at 2 p. m., at Chambers funeral home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Dr. Truett began his career before the Spanish-American War in his native State of Kentucky, riding over several counties and doing his dentistry in the mountaineers' homes. During the war he served in Cuba with the dental corps.

Dr. Truett had been ill three years.

Leaving the Army in 1908, he practiced dentistry at Seventh and G Streets Northwest 26 years before he retired about four years ago. His wife, the former Nellie May Colton, is a native Washingtonian. Surviving also are a son, Dabney Truett, and a daughter, Nancy Settle Truett.

L. M. Larsen, Marine Band Veteran, Dies

Military rites for Lauritz M. Larsen, member of the United States Marine Band for more than a quarter of a century before he retired in 1921, will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at Chambers' funeral home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

He died Sunday at Naval Medical Center.

Born in Bergen, Norway, 79 years ago, Mr. Larsen had been identified with music nearly all his life. As a young man he played in a symphony orchestra conducted by Edvard Grieg, noted Norwegian composer. Later he joined the Norwegian army as a bandsman and participated in many public events, among them the funeral of Ole Bull, famous Norwegian violinist.

Jeter R. Rollins Funeral Services

Jeter Ralph Rollins had been crippled more than half of his 45 years, and the flowers which filled the old house on Chapel Road in Seat Pleasant, Md., where he had lived since a small boy, were his pride and joy.

Therefore, when he became ill last February he asked not to be taken to the hospital. Instead, his sister, Mrs. Grace Evelyn Hayes, who lived next door, came to take care of him, and the first thing he would ask her to do each morning was to water the plants.

He died at his home on Saturday with his flowers still about him. The funeral will be today at 11 a. m. from Chambers funeral home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast. Burial will be in Addison Chapel, Seat Pleasant.

G. E. Kinsey's Rites To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Granville E. Kinsey, 62, well-known Gaithersburg businessman, who died at his home yesterday, will be held at the Methodist Church at Damascus, Md., at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The Rev. James H. Haley, pastor of Epworth Methodist Church, Gaithersburg, and the Rev. William T. Gover, retired Methodist minister, will officiate. Burial will be in the cemetery adjoining the Damascus church.

Lord Mancroft, Active In Politics in 20s, Dies

Forest Row, England, Aug. 17 (AP). Arthur Michael Samuel, Lord Mancroft, 69, a parliamentary undersecretary for various government ministries in the 1920's, died today.

Funeral for H. B. Coakley Will Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services for Harry Boyd Coakley, 45, who drowned Saturday night in the Anacostia River, will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. from Chambers funeral home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast. Burial and graveside services will be held in his native village of Osso, Va., at 2 p. m.

COAKLEY

Since he was 11 years old, Mr. Coakley had suffered from osteomyelitis, a bone ailment which affected his leg, according to a brother, Roy M. Coakley. He often went down on the river to sun himself, his brother said, and probably waded into the water and was caught in the swift current.

An accountant in the Public Building Administration Mr. Coakley lived at 1505 Massachusetts Avenue Southeast. He studied medicine at the University of Virginia, but an injury prevented him from graduating. His brother estimated that for the past 20 years Mr. Coakley had spent an average of two months out of each year in hospitals receiving treatment.

Surviving in addition to the brother are a sister, Mrs. Daisie E. Staples of New York, and another brother, Dan K. Coakley of Osso.

Mrs. John D. Biggers' Funeral Will Be Held Today in Ohio

Services for Mrs. Mary Isobel Biggers, 54, wife of John D. Biggers, president of Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co. and former production director of the Office of Production Management, will be held today at her home in Toledo, Ohio.

In ill health for some time, Mrs. Biggers died Saturday night in Toledo of a heart attack. She was well known in Washington, coming here to live with her husband when he held posts with the Government.

After serving with OPM, Biggers was asked by President Roosevelt to go to England as a special production emissary. Six months ago he returned to Toledo, where he had been in active management of the glass firm. His first post in Washington was in 1937 when he was appointed by the President to direct the unemployment census.

Surviving in addition to Biggers are two daughters, Mrs. Corwin R. Lockwood, wife of Lieutenant Lockwood, U. S. N., of Arlington, Va., and Mrs. Sprague H. Gardiner of Little Rock, Ark., and a son, Lieut. Reeve K. Biggers, United States Navy.

Walker Whiteside, Actor 50 Years, Succumbs at 71

Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., Aug. 17 (AP).—Walker Whiteside, 71, a well known actor whose career in the theater extended over a period of 50 years, died tonight at his home. He had been ill for three years.

Born in Logansport, Ind., Whiteside gained national fame as the "boy Hamlet" when he toured in Shakespearean productions at the age of 15.

His most famous role was as David in "The Melting Pot." Never interested in motion pictures or the radio, Whiteside remained a trouper throughout his career, making frequent appearances in theaters of the Midwest and Far West.

In all, Whiteside had starring roles in 36 plays, and he wrote, produced and took the feature role in six: "The Magic Melody," "We Are King," "Heart and Sword," "The Arabian," "The Red Cockade" and "The Hindu."

After taking "The Master of Ballantrae" on a Nation-wide tour in the season of 1935-1936, Whiteside retired to continue his writing.

Lauderbough Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for George R. Lauderbough, resident of Washington for 23 years, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. from the W. W Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia Avenue Northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Lauderbough was a cashier in an E Street restaurant for 13 years before a heart attack two years ago forced him to stop work. He died Sunday at his residence, 1223 Crittenden Street Northwest. A flower lover, he spent many hours in the garden after his retirement. He was born in Pittsburgh.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Ann Miller, formerly of Fort Collins, Colo., now of Washington; two brothers William E. Lauderbough of Pittsburgh and John A Lauderbough of Los Angeles; three nephews and one niece.
